(Rev. 1:1...)

This is a translation and a study of the Book of Revelation. This work presents the possible presence of a literary numbering system in Revelation. Following the PebbleCounting hypothesis, this numbering system appears to be inherent in the Greek and consistently used throughout Revelation, as it is in other books of Scripture. © Steve, 2024-2025. Update: Dec. 21, 2025.

This study is freely available at www.pebblecounting.com, along with studies/translations of other books of Scripture. If you haven't had a chance to watch it, the "Intro to PebbleCounting" video is a good place to begin.

John uses a variety of literary structuring devices simultaneously:

- Thousand-element intervals – 3x – followed by a 437-fold restoration of the dwelling place of God with His people. This macrostructure appears to be based upon that of the flood narrative. The 437-fold may also mirror/restore Gen. 1:1-3:23 – the prelude of creation, humanity's fall, and the separation from God's presence. (See notes, Genesis.)
- Composite literary statures ranging from 111 to 777 for each of the seven sections of Revelation. The majority are forward-oriented. Some are backward-oriented and may have associated meaning. Composite statures build toward stature of New Jerusalem, p. 67.
- Formation of all composite numbers (e.g. 42, 1260, 7000, 666, 1600) from literary identities and corresponding actions within the same contexts.
- Literary cross-referencing reaching forward and backward from core metrics in chapters 11 and 12. See illustration and notes, page 3. This device appears to be related to the scroll John eats (Rev. 10:10) and the measurements of temple and altar that proceed (Rev. 11:1).
- Relationship between time-based measures and the layout of literary sets in the same contexts.
- Total literary count of the book (3545 elements) corresponding to the sum of time values of specific measure (e.g., "days, thousand two-hundred sixty") and of mystery (e.g., "time, little").
- Six-thousandfold measure of the age, sequenced in components of four thousandfolds and two thousandfolds, like Daniel's. When combined with general literary time values, the total becomes 6132, which is equivalent to Daniel's total literary time value.
- A 2000-fold measure in response to the question "until when."
- Literary mirroring at cross-reference points, thousandfold points, and other contexts, as measured by total literary count. (continued)

"I AM" | For the counting of this divine title, see comments at John 6:35.

100 Elements

[2-5] I, John, your brother and participant in the trouble
 [6-7] and kingdom and endurance in Jesus – was on the island
 [8] being called Patmos, because of the word of God
 [9] and the testimony of Jesus
 [10] I was in the Spirit in the Lord's Day

[1] and I heard, behind me
 [9-10] a voice, great, like a trumpet, saying:

[2] what you see, write in a book
 [4-10] and send to the seven churches:

[4-10] to Ephesus and to Smyrna and to Pergamum and to Thyatira and to Sardis and to Philadelphia and to Laodicea

[1-2] and I turned, to see

[1] the voice that spoke with me

[3-4]* and turning, I saw:

[2-8] seven lampstands,

[9] golden

[10] and in midst of the lampstands, [One] like a Son of Man, wearing a robe

[1-2]* and having wrapped around at His breasts a sash,

[3] golden

[4-5] now His head and His hair (were) white as wool,

[6] white as snow

[7-8]* and His eyes (were) like a flame of fire

[9-10]* and His feet (were) like fine-bronze, as in a furnace, having been refined

[1-2] and His voice (was) like a voice of waters, many

[3-9]* and having in His right hand, stars seven

[10] and from His mouth (was) a sword,

[1-2] two-mouthed [double-edged],

[3] sharp, going out

[4] and His face, as the sun, shines in its strength

[5-6]* and when I saw Him, I fell toward His feet as dead

[5-6] and He put His right hand upon me, saying

[7] do not fear

[7] I AM:

[8-9] the first and the last

[10] and the living

[1-2] and I was dead, and behold, living, I am, to the ages of the ages

[3-4] and I have the keys of the thanatos [death] and of the hades [death's place]

100 Elements

- Literary titles for each of the seven major sections, based upon tenfold word counts, like Daniel.
- All tenfold and hundred-fold special numbers, shown in tan font to the right of the passage, and reflected in gray-colored cells on the table of literary counts, total to 430. Of these, seventy pertain to Satan's host. This design may model 430 for the Exodus adversity and 70 for the Babylonian adversity.
- 720-fold stature of "by faith" (green) subject columns. See 21:17.

This translation can be printed, the commentary (the right side of the pages) trimmed off, and the translation taped into seven vertical banners. The banners can be placed, one beside the next, on a wall for easier viewing of the literary devices:

"and turning, I saw" | This line is the culmination of the first 100 elements in the Apocalypse. The two tenfold literary identities are the Father (who gives the Apocalypse) and Jesus: (10) x (10) = 100-fold. On the significance of a turning-around point at 100 elements, see comments, Gen. 3:24.

"His breasts... eyes... feet" | Like Hebrew dual nouns, two of each are in view.

"and having in His right hand, stars seven" | This is the first instance of the (unit | quantity) format in Revelation. It stands out against the backdrop of the (quantity | unit) format: the "seven spirits," "seven churches," "seven lampstands." Although both forms are grammatically normal, the transition from one to another indicates mystery (see below), as with Daniel.

[8] write, therefore,

[9] what you see:

[5] and what they are –

[1-2] and what they are about, to be after this

[1]* the mystery of the seven stars

[10] which you saw at My right hand

[2-3]* and the seven lampstands, the golden:

[4-10] the seven stars

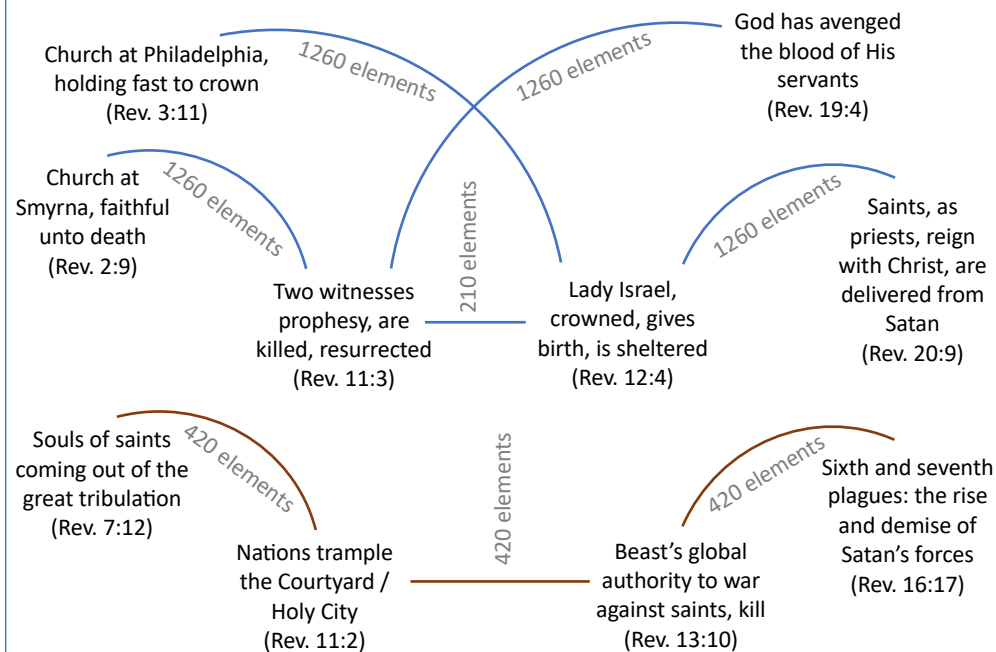

[1] angels of the seven churches, are

[2-9] and the lampstands, the seven:

[10] seven churches, are

(...Rev. 1:20)

Literary cross-referencing is a major design feature in Revelation. The illustration below complements what is shown in the tables of literary elements presented later in this study. As with the thousandfold macro-sections, literary mirroring is evident at the cross-referenced points, which are shown with dashed lines in the translation.

In the top illustration, the measure “days, thousand, two hundred, sixty” is a direct literary equivalent to 1260 elements. It is also an indirect literary equivalent to the 210 core elements: $(210 \text{ elements}) \times (2 \text{ witnesses}) \times (\text{literary “month”} / 10 \text{ elements}) \times (30 \text{ days/month}) = 1260 \text{ days}$

At the bottom, the measure “months, forty (and) two” is equivalent to the 420 core elements: $(420 \text{ elements}) \times (\text{literary “month”} / 10 \text{ elements}) = 42 \text{ months}$

“the mystery of the seven stars” | The following lines require careful literary counting. John’s use of the definite article “the” indicates resumptive references (the seven stars, the seven lampstands), which allows the literary count of cardinal number seven to be reduced to one rather than being carried in full value again. Once John begins his equative statements, the full value of seven is carried for only one side of each statement. The phrase “the lampstands, the seven” is counted as $1 + 7 = 8$ elements due to apposition. (This counting is similar to that of Gen. 41.)

In this chapter, John saw “stars seven” (unit | quantity) in the right hand of Jesus. Then, Jesus identified this feature of the vision as being a “mystery.” In explaining the mystery, Jesus inverted the format to the more commonly used (quantity | unit) format: “seven stars.” A similar pattern exists in the explanation of “the lampstands, the seven” as being “seven churches.”

Moving forward in Revelation, we will be looking for other instances of the (unit | quantity) format for the possibility of hidden meaning or literary device, similar to other books of Scripture.

For each of the seven churches in this first section of Revelation, John appears to employ unique literary features to highlight the church’s position in sequence. The following composites for each church are based upon the approach taken in Daniel. Here, the composites will be formed as follows:

- (2x) tenfold literary identities (those of Jesus and the Spirit), each having been presented earlier via tenfold literary sets, working in harmony to do a certain number of things. In this case, the Spirit is amplifying the identity of Jesus, Jesus’ attributes, and His message.
- (1x) tenfold literary identity (that of each church), being presented via tenfold literary sets, characterized by a certain number of attributes.
- A certain number of things being given to each church.

Two of these churches have comprehensively positive reviews. These two may be highlighted by literary cross-reference to the core metrics presented in Rev. 11:2-3. Thematically, Smyrna may correspond with the “altar,” and Philadelphia with the “temple,” which John is commanded to measure. These features of the global church are also reflected forward toward the back half of the Apocalypse as shown in the illustration on the left.

[1] to angel of the, in Ephesus, church, write: (Rev. 2:1...)

[3] thus says He,

[4-10] holding the seven stars in His right hand

[1-7] He, walking around in midst of the seven lampstands,

[8] the golden

[9] I know:

[1-3] your works and the labor and your endurance

[4-5] and that you are not able, to bear evils

[6] and you test

[1-2] those calling themselves apostles and are not

[7] and you find them

[3] (to be) false

[8] and endurance, you have

[9-10] and you bear up through My name and have not grown weary

[10] but I have against you:

[1-2] that your love, the first – you neglect!

[3] remember, then

[4] from you have fallen

[5] and repent!

[1] and the first works, do

[1] if not, I come to you

[2] and I will remove your lampstand from her place

[2] unless you repent

[3-4] yet this you have, that you hate:

[4] the works of the Nicolaitans

[3] which I also hate

[5-6] he having an ear, let him hear

[4] what the Spirit says to the churches

[7] to him conquering

[5] I will give to him

[8] to eat from the tree of the life

[6] which is in the paradise of God

[2] and to angel of the, in Smyrna, church, write:

[7-8]* thus says the First and the Last

[9-10] who was dead, and lived!

Ephesus: first of seven

One feature of Him speaking: “Thus says He... He...” By the literary interlock with the immediately preceding verses, the emphasis is on this Person being the same One who has just been described: the Son of Man. The Spirit of God is also speaking. Note the placement of the Spirit’s speaking: prior to the presentation of the one thing Jesus “will give” to the conquerors. The presentation of component statures (100, then 10, then 1) is indicated by the direction of arrows in the vertical purple lines on the left.

Speaking: Jesus x Spirit = (10) x (10) = 100

One feature emphasized for Ephesus: The neglect of “first” love

Ephesus: (tenfold identity) x (1 feature) = 10

One thing “given” to the conquerors: “to eat” (from tree of life) = 1

Literary stature at Ephesus = 100 + 10 + 1 = 111

“your works” | Jesus speaks with the singular “your,” referring to the angel. This is typical throughout the paragraphs to the seven churches, with some exceptions noted below.

“your love, the first, you neglect” | Jesus makes it clear that love ought to be at the forefront of the Ephesian church’s identity. Instead, it is neglected among the elements of the tenfold identity by which they are recognized (their first literary set, just above). So crucial is this neglected aspect of their identity that Jesus is already coming (present tense) to remove their lampstand. This upending of their functional identity may be like Jesus’ interaction with the rich young ruler, Luke 18:18-30, for whom the first of the Ten Commandments was neglected. The Ephesian church, like that ruler, was meant to regain a commendable, tenfold identity by reestablishing love for God as its first, foundational elements: “the first works, do.”

“which is in the paradise of God” | Uniquely, the literary count for each of the seven churches appears to end with a fivefold half-set. This device often indicates death/destruction, change, giving/receiving, or a plot twist. For Ephesus, this device corresponds with receiving something Jesus is offering to the conquerors.

“the First and the Last, who became dead and lived” | In this parallel, “First” corresponds with “became dead,” and “Last” corresponds with “lived.” The concept of “First.. death” may be a parallel with “the death, the second” at the end of Smyrna’s section.

[1] I know of you –

[9-10] the trouble and the poverty –

[1] but rich, you are!

[2] and the blasphemy

[5] from those saying, “Jews,”

[6] to be, themselves

[7-8] and are not, but (are) a synagogue of Satan

[3] let no one fear

[4-5] what you are about, to experience

[9] behold, (there) is about

[10] to throw, the Devil, from you, into prison

[6] that you may be tested –

[7]* and you will have trouble, days, ten

[8] be faithful unto death [thanatos]

[2] and I will give you the crown of life

[9] he having an ear

[10] let him hear

[3] what the Spirit says to the churches

[1-2] he conquering, will not be harmed from the death [thanatos], the second

[3] and to angel of the, in Pergamum, church, write:

[4-5] thus says Him having the sword,

[6-7]* the two-mouthed,

[8] the sharp:

[9] I know

[3] where you live:

[1] where the throne of Satan (is)

[4] and you are holding My name

[5-7] and you have not denied My faith even in the days of Antipas, My witness, My faithful

[8]* who was killed among you

[2] where the Satan dwells

[10] but I have against you a few:

[9-10] that you have there those holding:

[3] the teaching of Balaam

[4] who taught the Balak

[5] to throw a scandal before the sons of Israel

Rev. 2:10

Measurement of “the altar”: a 1260-element literary cross reference to the two witnesses (Rev. 11:3)

Smyrna: second of seven

2 features of Him speaking, in couplets: First/dead and Last/lived

Speaking: Jesus x Spirit x (2 features) = (10) x (10) x (2) = 200

2 features emphasized at Smyrna, in couplets: trouble/blasphemy and poverty/richness

Smyrna: (10) x (2 features) = 20

2 things given to conquerors, in couplets:

Have trouble / crown of life; to not be harmed by the death, the second = 2

Literary stature at Smyrna = 200 + 20 + 2 = 222

By literary cross-reference (dashed green line), the church at Smyrna may be a prototype for – and may be one of – the “two witnesses” of chapter 11. The cross-reference is measured by literary days, which are equivalent to total literary count.

“behold, (there) is about to throw, the Devil, from you... you may be tested... you will have trouble” | The “you” in these three lines is plural, indicating the plurality of individual believers of this church (typical).

“days, ten” | This phrase is in John’s (unit | quantity) format. The church at Smyrna would establish their tenfold identity by enduring the Devil’s testing for ten days. The phrase may recall the genuineness and competency of Daniel and his companions. Upon examination, those servants were found to be “ten of hands” better than all their peers. The phrase “ten of hands” may have indicated God’s presence with those four servants (see Daniel 1).

“will not be harmed” | The literary count for the church in Smyrna ends as a fivefold set, indicating a change. At this very point, God gives hope and promises ultimate deliverance from “the death, the second.” Note the segue from the first death, which was featured as the tenth and final element in Smyrna’s tenfold identity set: “be faithful unto death.”

“the two-mouthed” | Two “mouths” (a double-edged sword) are featured in this phrase. Perhaps one edge of the sword is to cut the hold of Balaam’s teaching, and the other edge is to cut the hold of the Nicolaitans’ teaching. Later in the Pergamum section, Jesus warns He will wage war “with the sword of My mouth.” These three literary instances of “mouth” form the threefold highlight of Pergamum’s place: the third of seven, facing a threefold war at the mouth of Jesus.

“who was killed among you” | Here, the plural form you is used.

- [6]* to eat (food) sacrificed to idols
 [7] and to commit sexual immorality
 [1-2] in this way, have also, you, (those) holding:
 [8] the teaching of the Nicolaitans, likewise
 [3] repent, then!
 [1] if not, I come to you quickly
 [2] and will wage war against them with the sword of My mouth
 [4-5] he having an ear, let him hear
 [3] what the Spirit says to the churches
 [1] to him conquering
 [4-5] I will give him the manna, the being hidden
 [6-7] and I will give him a stone, white
 [8-9] and upon the stone a name, new, having been written
 [9] that no one knows
 [2] except him receiving

[4] and to angel of the, in Thyatira, church, write:

- [10] thus says the Son of God –
 [1-2]* He, having His eyes like a flame of fire
 [3-4]* and His feet like fine bronze:
 [5] I know of you –
 [3-7] your works and the love and the faith and the service and the endurance –
 [8-9] and your works, the last, (are) more than the first
 [6] but I have against you
 [10]* that you permit:
 [10] the woman –
 [1-2] Jezebel, who is calling herself a prophet
 [3-4] and she teaches and deceives My servants:
 [5-6] to commit sexual immorality and to eat (food) sacrificed to idols
 [7] and I gave her time
 [7] that she might repent
 [8] and she is not willing
 [9] to repent from her sexual immoralities!
 [8] behold, I throw her into a (sick) bed
 [1-2] and those committing adultery with her, into trouble, great
 [3] unless they repent of her works
 [9] and her children I will kill by death [thanatos]

Pergamum: third of seven

Three features of Him speaking: “having the sword¹, the two-mouthed², the sharp³.” This threefold aspect may also be reflected in the threefold literary instances of “mouth” (see discussion, above).

Speaking: Jesus x Spirit x 3 = (10) x (10) x (3 features) = 300

Three features emphasized at Pergamum: (3x) holding things (Jesus, Balaam, Nicolaitans). Another threefold is with “Antipas, My witness, My faithful.”

Pergamum: (10) x (3 features) = 30

Threefold things “given” to the conquerors, presented in couplets: (1) manna, hidden; (2) a stone, white; and (3) and a name, new = 3-fold

Literary stature at Smyrna = 300 + 30 + 3 = 333

“(food) sacrificed” | This is a single Greek noun.

“His eyes... His feet” | Each reference is twofold in keeping with the literary counting noted for Jesus’ description. Two eyes + two feet = 4-fold.

“you permit the woman Jezebel” | With Ephesus, the point of departure was identified after the completion of the first tenfold identity set. Here, Thyatira’s mistake is identified as the tenth element, as the culminating mark of the church’s core identity.

Thyatira: fourth of seven

Four features of Him speaking: eyes (two) and feet (two).

Speaking: Jesus x Spirit x (4 features) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

Four features of Thyatira: (4x) Godly works (love/faith/service/endurance) in contrast with (4x) Jezebel works (immorality/idolatry/immorality/adultery)

Thyatira: (10) x (4 features) = 40

Four things “given”: (4x) verb “to give” (time for repentance, justice for works, authority over nations, star). In greater focus upon the conquerors: (2x) “authority... and he will shepherd”; (2x) “the star, the morning”

Literary stature at Thyatira = 400 + 40 + 4 = 444

[4] and (there) will know, all the churches

[10] that I AM:

[1-2] the, searching minds and hearts

[3] and I will give you –

[4] each person – according to your works

[5]* to you, now, I say –

[6] to the rest of you in Thyatira –

[5] as many as do not have this teaching

[6] who do not know the deep (things) of Satan

[10] as they say

[7] I do not throw upon you, otherwise, a burden

[7-8] only what you have, hold

[8] until which ever I come

[9] and he, conquering

[10] and he, keeping until the end, My works

[9] I will give him authority over the nations

[1] and he will shepherd them with a staff of iron

[2-3] as the vessels, the clay, are broken

[10] as I also received from My Father

[1-2] and I will give him the star, the morning

[4-5] he having an ear, let him hear

[3] what the Spirit says to the churches

(...Rev. 2:29)

[5] and to angel of the, in Sardis, church, write:

(Rev. 3:1...)

[4-10] thus says Him, having the seven Spirits of God

[1-7] and the seven stars:

[8] I know of you –

[1] the works

[2-3] that, a name, you have, that you live

[4] and dead you are!

[5] be, waking!

[1-3] and strengthen the rest that are about, to die

[9] for I have not found of you:

[4] the works having been completed before My God

[5-7] remember, then, how you received and heard

[8-9] and keep and repent

[10] if then you do not awake

[10] I will come like a thief!

From the beginning of Ephesus (Rev. 2:1) = 171 elements
From the ending of Laodicea (Rev. 3:22) = 171 elements

“to you, now, I say” | If literary counts are accurate, the dashed line indicates the midpoint in the series of seven churches (Rev. 2:1 – 3:22). This is also a centerpiece context: Jesus has just mentioned “all the churches” and has promised justice for “each person” among them all. The seven churches are being gathered together from throughout the age, as by a mirroring device, rather than being presented in a progressive sequence (as will be the seals, trumpets, and bowls). This design is reinforced by the literary inversions that follow this reflection point. For churches #4 (Thyatira) through #7 (Laodicea), the literary position of the Spirit’s speaking is placed after the countable things being given to the conquerors. This adjustment has the effect of inverting the final direction arrows for the composite statures, for example:

From:

To:

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● (Jesus) x (3-fold) ▼ (Pergamum) x (3-fold) ▼ (Spirit) ▼ (3-fold gift) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ = 300 ■ = 30 ■ = 3 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● (Jesus) x (4-fold) ▼ (Thyatira) x (4-fold) ▲ (4-fold gift) ● (Spirit) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ = 400 ■ = 40 ■ = 4
--	--	--	--

In addition, the order of literary composites is inverted among the final three churches: #5 Sardis = 777, #6 Philadelphia = 666, and #7 Laodicea = 555. This inverted sequence may indicate the focal/mirroring midpoint at 444.

Sardis: fifth of seven – Notice that the literary stature is out of sequence.

Seven features of Him speaking: He has sevenfold: “the seven Spirits of God and the seven stars.” Because the “seven Spirits of God” are one and the same as the singular “Spirit” who is speaking (last line for Sardis, page below), the doubling of the sevenfolds does not result in a (7) x (7) factor. Speaking: Jesus x Spirit x (sevenfold feature) = (10) x (10) x (7) = 700

Sevenfold features emphasized at Sardis: (1) they have a name, that they live; (2) they are dead; (3) the rest are about to die; (4) their service to God is incomplete; (5-6) they previously received and heard God’s truth; (7) they have a few names, who have not defiled their garments.

Sardis: (10) x (7-fold) = 70

Literary Stature of Sardis = 777

(continued...) Sevenfold things given: Jesus will stand with Sardis’s few remaining saints – the “few names” who stand in contrast with the fraudulent “name” (reputation) of the church. To these few conquerors, Jesus will give glory: (1-2) they will walk with Jesus in “whites,” being deemed “worthy”; (3-4) be clothed in “garments, white”; (5) be named for eternal life; (6-7) and be confessed before the Father and before His angels.

Literary stature at Sardis = 700 + 70 + 7 = 777

“before your feet” | The second person singular “your” continues to be used. As with the vision of Jesus, two feet are implied by the context.

Rev. 3:12

Measurement of "the temple": a 1260-element literary cross reference to Lady Israel, crowned, who gives birth and is sheltered (Rev. 12:4)

By literary cross-reference, the church at Philadelphia may be the prototype for Lady Israel being sheltered from the adversary (12:4, 20:9). As with Smyrna, the cross-reference is measured by literary days, which are equivalent to total literary count. This church may be the other of the two witnesses, by the same cross-reference family. Literary mirroring may distinguish the near context, as shown with the green dashed lines.

Laodicea: seventh of seven

Five features of Him speaking: "the amen¹, the witness², the faithful³ and true⁴, the ruler⁵ of the creation of God."

Speaking: Jesus x Spirit x 5 = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

Five features emphasized at Laodicea: fivefold combined instances of "cold," "hot," and "lukewarm" (not including the hypothetical "would that... you were"): "that neither cold¹, you are, neither hot²... because lukewarm³ you are, and neither hot⁴, neither cold⁵..." This fivefold may be reflected forward in the fivefold identity of the next literary set: "you are the wretched and pitiable and poor and blind and naked!"

Laodicea: (10) x (5) = 50

Five things given to the conquerors: Jesus uses the verb "to buy" in association with fourfold things the conquerors need to receive from Him: (1) gold; (2-3) garments, white; and (4) salve. Considering that these are spiritual remedies – and as such, gifts that could not be purchased – the verb "to buy" may be a play on the Laodiceans' delusion that they were "rich." Having followed Jesus' advice and having received these fourfold things, the conquerors will then receive a singlefold gift: to sit with Jesus on His throne.

Literary stature of Laodicea = 500 + 50 + 5 = 555

Literary Count – Chapters 1-3

- (220x) Heaven
- (5x) Earth
- (185x) Churches
- (47x) John
- (45x) Adversary
- (502x) subtotal
- (10x) “days, ten”
- (512x) Total

Three Greek words are used exactly ten times¹ in chapters 1-3: the nouns “spirit” and “angels” and the preposition “with.” Following the example from Daniel, a literary title for this section may be “Spirit with Angels.”

The wrapping up of chapters 1 – 3 into complete literary sets indicates a point of transition moving into chapter 4. Uniquely, in this transition from an earthly visionary context to a heavenly one, John’s tenfold set is completed at the beginning of the next major section. Moving forward, we will look for similar points of completion in literary sets as an indication of section breaks.

“come here” | This phrase, used here and in 11:12, employs two Greek words beginning with alpha and with Omega (later called omega). The phrase may point to the span of God’s existence, even as it calls John from the time-bound realm to the heavenly realm for a prophetic visionary experience.

“thrones, twenty-four” | This number in (unit | quantity) format may reflect the merging of two prominent numbers from the testaments of Scripture: the twelve tribes with the twelve apostles. Notice the inversion to (quantity | unit) format as John explains more about these thrones in the next line.

“wings, six” | Each cherub of the tabernacle and temple eras had two wings (1 Kings 6:24, 2 Chr. 5:7). Each seraph of Isaiah 6 had six wings. Each of the four living creatures of Ezekiel had four wings (Ez. 1, 10). The living creatures here in Revelation have six wings each. Multiplying by the fourfold quantity of creatures, the total number of wings is twenty-four. The angelic wings may be a literary parallel with the elder thrones, both numbers having the (unit | quantity) format. Wings may represent the ability to access whatever the eye can see (as with birds). The creatures’ six wings may also correlate with the six positional/directional modifiers in this passage: bodies being “in the midst of” and “around” (encircling) the throne (2x); eyes being “in front and from behind,” “all around and from within” (4x). It is from this sixfold vantage and sixfold accessibility that the four creatures speak of the holiness of God. Their scope includes the reaches of time: past, present, and future. They may be speaking authoritatively about God’s holiness in all reaches of time because they can see into the reaches of time.

[1] and in midst of the elders –
 [1] a Lamb
 [2-3] standing, as having been slain
 [4-10]* having horns, seven

“a scroll having been written from within and from behind” | John uses two of the same positional/directional modifiers he used for the eyes of the living creatures (see above). These modifiers may reflect more than simply the location of words on the scroll. They may reflect a transtemporal nature to this writing, as with the living creatures. The use of these dual modifiers – “from within,” “from behind” – may also reflect the twofold, clear-yet-hidden nature of the scroll’s contents.

“seals, seven” | The seven seals will be presented in chapters 6-7 with a doubled literary design. The seals will be presented in a clear, sequential format as the opening of six seals (chapter 6) and then the seventh (8:1 and following). The seals will be presented in a hidden format as a literary sixfold “sealing” of God’s people (chapter 7, noun and verb forms) in anticipation of the opening of the seventh seal (8:1 and following). In the quest for the worthy Person, the sevenfold nature of the seals may also be reflected in the sevenfold use of “to open” (4x), “to loosen” (1x), and “to inspect” (2x).

“and one of the elders said to me” | If the literary counting is accurate, this unidentified elder is reflected in the heavenly subject column. It is not John.

“horns, seven” | The slain Lamb is nonetheless standing and having sevenfold power to thrust down His enemies. The opening of the seven seals in their numbered sequence will be the display of this divine power against the enemies, though with an acute awareness of the impact upon humanity in general (e.g., the restraint shown in the third seal) and upon God’s own people (e.g., the fifth seal). The thrust of the seventh seal may extend through the seven trumpets and seven bowls.

[1-7]* and eyes, seven
 [2-3] which are the (seven) Spirits of God having been sent into all the earth
 [8] and He came
 [9] and He received from the right hand
 [4] of Him sitting upon the throne
 [10] and when he took the scroll

[5-8] the four creatures
 [9-10] and the twenty-

[1-4] four elders fell down before the Lamb
 [5] having, each, a harp
 [6-7] and a bowl, golden, being full of incense
 [8] which are the prayers of the saints
 [9-10] and they sing a song, new, saying

[1] worthy You are
 [2] to take the scroll
 [3] and to open its seals
 [4] because You were slain
 [5-8] and You ransomed for God in Your blood, from every tribe and language and people and nation
 [9-10] and You made them, for our God, a kingdom and priests

[1] and they will reign upon the earth
 [8] and I saw
 [9] and I heard

[1-2] a voice of angels, many, around the throne
 [3-4] and the creatures and the elders
 [5-6]* and was, their number, myriads of myriads
 [7-8]* and thousands of thousands
 [9-10] saying with a voice, loud

[1] worthy is the Lamb
 [2] the having been slain
 [3-9] to receive the power and wealth and wisdom and strength and honor and glory and blessing

[1-4]* and every creature that (is) in the heaven and upon the earth and under the earth and upon the sea
 [5-6] and what (is) in them, all
 [10] I heard
 [7] saying

“eyes, seven, which are the (seven) Spirits of God” | John immediately explains the meaning behind the (unit | quantity) format. The “eyes, seven” of the Lamb are the (seven) Spirits of God. This is an equative sentence, and the value of seven is carried only once. The presence of God’s Spirit is the personal access of Jesus (His eyesight) among His people “in all the earth.” Jesus is watching! His heartfelt presence corresponds with the “sealing” of God’s people (see note above, seals, seven).

“myriads of myriads and thousands of thousands” | These are heavenly numbers like those of Daniel 7:10.

“and every creature” | This noun is different than the one used for the four creatures. Here, the emphasis is on the creatures as things created rather than as things alive.

[8] to Him, sitting upon the throne
[10] and to the Lamb

[9-10] (be) the blessing and the honor

[1-2] and the glory and the power to the ages

[3] of ages

[4-7] and the four creatures said,

[8] “amen!”

[9-10] and the elders fell down and worshiped

(...Rev. 5:14)

[1] and I saw

(Rev. 6:1...)

[1] when opened, the Lamb, one of the seven seals

[2] and I heard

[1] one of the four creatures, saying like a voice of thunder

[1] come!

[3] and I saw

[2-3] and behold, a horse, white!

[4] and he sitting upon it

[5] having a bow

[6] and (there) was given to him a crown

[7] and he went out

[8] conquering

[9] and in order that he might conquer

[2-3] and when He opened the seal, the second

[4] I heard

[2] the second creature saying

[10] come!

[1-2] and (there) went out another horse, red!

[3] and to him sitting upon it

[4] (there) was given to him

[5] to take the peace from the earth

[1] and in order that, one-another, (they) might slay

[2-3] and (there) was given to him a sword, great

Like the seven churches, the seven seals may have composite literary statures. For the first four seals, the heavenly identities that are aligned are the Lamb and each of the four living creatures. Ordinal numbers “second,” “third,” “fourth,” and so on, are typically valued as single elements for the literary count. Here they appear to take on cumulative values for the purpose of multiplying against tenfold identities. Such a literary device indicates the growing, cumulative effect of these seven seals, rather than the sequential impacts of separable events. Notice also that the four riders are presented in exactly forty literary elements, allowing their tenfold literary identities to rise into the action of the four composite literary statures. However, these forty elements are not evenly distributed, indicating the entanglement of their identities among the global calamities given to them.

White Horse & Rider: First of Four

One feature of the seal: It is seal “one”

Alignment: (Lamb) x (creature one) x (1) = (10) x (10) x (1) = 100

One feature of Rider: He has a bow.

First Rider: (10) x (1 feature) = 10

One thing “given” to the rider: “a crown” = 1

Literary Stature of White Horse & Rider = 100 + 10 + 1 = 111

Red Horse & Rider: Second of Four

A twofold feature of the seal: It is “the second” seal, cumulative

Alignment: (Lamb) x (second creature) x (2nd→2) = (10) x (10) x (2) = 200

Two features of Rider: power to “to take peace” that people “might slay”

Second Rider: (10) x (2 features) = 20

Two things “given” to the rider: “a sword, great” = 2 (literary elements)

Literary Stature of Red Horse & Rider = 200 + 20 + 2 = 222

Literary Stature of 1st Seal = 111

Literary Stature of 2nd Seal = 222

[4-5] and when He opened the seal, the third
 [5] I heard
 [3] the third creature saying
 [4] come!
 [6] and I saw
 [5-6] and behold, a horse, black!
 [7] and he sitting upon it
 [8-9] having a balance scale in his hand
 [7] and I heard
 [4]* like a voice in midst of the four creatures, saying
 [10]* a day's-measure of wheat (let be) of a day's-wage
 [1-3]* and three day's-measures of barley (let be) of a day's-wage
 [4-5] and the oil and the wine, you must not harm

[6-7] and when he opened the seal, the fourth
 [8] I heard
 [5] voice of fourth creature saying
 [9] and I saw
 [1] come!
 [2-3] and behold, a horse, green!
 [4] and he sitting upon it –
 [5] name of him (is) (the) Thanatos [death]
 [6] and the hades [death's place] followed with him
 [7-10]* and (there) was given to them, authority over a fourth of earth, to kill by sword and by famine and by thanatos [death] and by the beasts of the earth

Black Horse & Rider: Third of Four

A threefold feature of the seal: It is “the third” seal, cumulative
 Alignment: (Lamb) x (third creature) x (3rd→3) = (10) x (10) x (3) = 300

Three features of Rider: The “balance scale” appears to be pictured as a threefold image here: a tray on one side, a tray on the other side, and a balance point in the middle.

Third Rider: (10) x (3 features) = 30

Three things given to the rider: a threefold parameter (wheat for measure, barley for measure, and oil/wine for no measure) = 3

Literary Stature of Black Horse & Rider = 300 + 30 + 3 = 333

“a day's-measure of wheat (let be) of a day's-wage” | This is an equivalence statement that corresponds with the balance scale in the hand of the third rider. A “day's-measure of wheat” balances with a “day's-wage.” This statement is counted as a single literary element.

“and three day's-measures of barley (let be) of a day's wage” | This is another equivalence statement. The literary count is three due to the presence of the cardinal number three.

Green Horse & Thanatos: Fourth of Four

A fourfold feature of the seal: It is “the fourth” seal, cumulative
 Alignment: (Lamb) x (fourth creature) x (4th→4) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

Four features of Rider: “name of him (is) (the) Thanatos” This is the fourth time the word thanatos (“death”) has been used in Revelation, in reference to the first death. Thanatos is the angelic being having this name. This is his fourth appearance in the Apocalypse.

Fourth Rider: (10) x (4th → cumulative fourfold appearance) = 40

Four things “given” to the rider: fourfold authority to kill = 4

Literary Stature of Green Horse & Rider = 400 + 40 + 4 = 444

“over a fourth of earth, to kill...” | This is the first instance of a fraction in Revelation. In keeping with the pattern observed in Daniel, a fourfold is placed into the literary denominator to indicate death/destruction: in this case, four means of untimely death for humanity in general.

[8]* and when He opened the fifth seal

[10] I saw under the altar

[2] the souls of those having been slain because of the word of God

[3] and because of the testimony they had

[4-5] and they called out with a voice, great, saying

[6-9] until when, O Lord – the holy and true – will You not judge and avenge our blood

[1] from those dwelling upon the earth?

[1-2] and (there) was given, to them, each, a robe, white

[3] and (there) was spoken, to them, that:

[4-5] they will rest yet a time, little

Rev. 6:11

[6-7] until (there) must be fulfilled, also, their fellow-servants

and their brothers –

[8-9] those being about, to be killed

[10] like also they (were)

[1] and I saw

[9-10] when He opened the seal, the sixth

[2-3] and an earthquake, great, happened

[4-5] and the sun¹ became black like sackcloth, hairy

[6-7] and the moon², whole, became like blood

[8] and the stars³ of the heaven fell to the earth

[9-10] like a fig tree throws its unseasonable figs, by a wind, great, being shaken

[1-2] and the heaven⁴ was separated like a scroll being rolled up

[3-4] and every mountain⁵ and island⁶ from their places were shaken

[5-8] and the kings¹ of the earth and the nobles² and the generals³ and the wealthy⁴

[9-10] and the mighty⁵ and everyone⁶ –

[1-2] servant and free – hid themselves into the caves

[3] and into the rocks of the mountains

[4-5] and they said to the hills and the rocks

[6-7] fall upon us and hide us from the face

[10] of Him sitting upon the throne

[8] and from wrath of the Lamb

[9]* because (there) has come, the day,

[10] the great, of their wrath!

[1-2] and who is able, to stand? (...Rev. 6:17)

“and when He opened the fifth seal” | The change in sequence may signal a literary device: “fifth seal,” not “seal, the fifth” (like previous and forthcoming instances). On the 2000-fold measure that may proceed from “time, little” to “little time,” see comments, Rev. 20:3. This 2000-fold measure appears to be the answer to the question “until when” in context here. Judgment is given to these departed souls in Rev. 20:4. For other examples of “until when” with literary measure, see Dan. 8:13 (angels) and John 10:24 (the Jews).

Fifth Seal: the Saints

A fivefold feature of the seal: It is “the fifth” seal, cumulative

The Lamb opens the seal. An appeal to “the Lord, the holy and true” results in heavenly bounty (robes, white) and heavenly words (rest). This heavenly bounty and these heavenly words, in context of the heavenly altar, may originate from Him sitting upon the throne: the Father.

Alignment: (Lamb) x (the “Lord”) x (5th→5) = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

Five features of the saints: These saints open with the balance of a fivefold literary introduction in keeping with their identification as being under the altar: souls having reigned (1st element in this half-set, from earlier); having been slain because of God’s Word and because of testimony; calling with a voice, great. The Saints: (10) x (5 features) = 50

Five things “given” to these saints, counted together as literary elements: robes, white; a time, little; fulfillment of martyrdom among fellow-saints = 5

Literary Stature of the Saints = 500 + 50 + 5 = 555

Sixth Seal: the Day, the Great, of their Wrath

A sixfold feature of the seal: It is “the sixth” seal, cumulative

The Lamb opens the seal. Two heavenly identities are front and center, in view of the earth dwellers: Him sitting upon the throne, and the Lamb.

Alignment: (Lamb) x (God upon throne) x (6th→6) = (10) x (10) x (6) = 600

Six features of the Day: Sun, Moon, Stars, Heaven, Mountain, Island = 6

The Day: (10) x (6 features) = 60

Six things given over in the Day: kings, nobles, generals, wealthy, mighty, and everyone = 6 Note the twofold nature of the sixth thing: (slave + free).

Literary Stature of the Day, the Great, of their Wrath = 600 + 60 + 6 = 666

The closing lines of this page – “(there) has come, the day, the great... who is able, to stand?” – may interlock with the interlude on the next page, as shown by the mirroring of 36 elements.

2000 elements to “little time,” Rev. 20:3, judgment given to the saints, in response to “when”

Literary Stature of 5th Seal = 555

Literary Stature of 6th Seal = 666

“four angels to whom, (there) was given to them to harm...” | These angels may be the riders of the four horses previously identified as bringing harm.

“every tree” | “Every tree” may correspond with mature saints. See Rev. 9:4, where those not having the seal of God upon their foreheads are contrasted with positive things: earth’s grass, green plants, and trees.

“hundred forty four thousand... twelve thousand” | These are heavenly numbers of perfection, as are the constituent (12x) twelve thousands. The numbers appear to arise from dual series of twelve being multiplied together here. One series are the twelve tribes of Israel which are listed in this context. The other series may be the balance of the twenty-four elders: the twelve apostles. The thousandfold factor may reflect three tenfold heavenly identities who are aligned in sealing these sons of Israel: the “we” of “until we have sealed the servants of our God...” Who are these three identities? From the broader context, the Father is sitting upon His throne. It is from Him that the sealed scroll was given. Now the “seal of God” is used to seal God’s servants. It appears this method of authentication arises from God the Father. Also from the broader context, the Lamb is pictured next to the Father: the Person who has redeemed these servants. Thirdly, an angel is instrumental in sealing God’s servants, perhaps as a channel of God’s Spirit (see Rev. 1-3, “Spirit with Angels”). Thus:

(Father) x (Son) x (Angel/Spirit) x (Apostles) = 10 x 10 x 10 x 12 = 12,000.

The number 144000 and the constituent twelve-thousands are all identified as pertaining to one group of people: those sealed. The 144000 are carried as a special number for “faith,” as sown in the auxiliary column of the table.

If literary counts are accurate, the thousandth literary element in the Book of Revelation is shown with the dashed cyan line. The focus is on the sealing of the thousandfolds of God’s people. Like Daniel, John places the thousandth element in the immediate context of thousandfold literary statures. Literary mirroring is evident about this point.

The thousandfold structuring of Revelation may parallel the structuring of the flood narrative. The first thousandfold in the flood narrative occurs from Gen. 7:11 to 8:2a. This thousandfold in Genesis concludes with God remembering His covenant people (Noah and family) and sending a wind upon the earth, even as He closes the floodwater sources and restrains the rain from the heavens. Here at the first thousandfold in Revelation, we find similar themes of wind and of the restraint of damaging forces, as God remembers His covenant people to protect (seal) them.

Note the sixfold instances of “seal” (noun + verb forms) on this page.

“one from the elders” | This “one” fits within John’s own tenfold literary set, not within the adjacent heavenly set. Judging by the completeness of literary sets, this “one” of the elders appears to be John himself, as one of the twelve apostles, speaking from the other side of the apocalyptic vision. If so, this finding appears to confirm the identity of the author of Revelation as being the Apostle John, as they are represented within the same subject column.

The 149-fold measure is mirrored about the completion of the first thousandfold in total literary count, as shown above. This binding will extend until the beginning of the trumpets in major section #3. The literary measure of this binding is 149 + 149 = 298-fold.

Seventh Seal: Heavenly Throne Scene

The seventh seal is presented as such in Rev. 8:1 (see below). The literary stature of the seventh seal appears to be reflected in the content of chapter 7 leading into 8:1. In this passage, the word “seal” (noun + verb forms, see the superscript counting) is used seven times, the seventh being at 8:1.

The composite literary stature for this seventh seal is reflected about the cross-reference point at Rev. 7:12. The 70-fold component (the gathering to the throne) is presented first. The 700-fold component (God and the Lamb) is presented last, at the beginning of chapter 8. In the middle, at exactly the cross-reference point, is the giving of sevenfold praise to God. By implication, the richest praise arises from the sufferings of God’s people.

A sevenfold gathering to the throne: (1-2) a “multitude, great”; (3-6) “from all nations, tribes, peoples, languages, standing”; (7) “and all the angels stood”. Thus, the Gathering: (7-fold gathering) x (tenfold identity) = 70

Seven things given for the Heavenly Throne Scene: sevenfold worship (“the blessing and the glory and the wisdom and the thanksgiving and the honor and the power and the strength (be) to our God”) = 7

A sevenfold feature of the seal: it is “the seventh” seal, cumulative. The Lamb opens the seal. As before, two heavenly identities are in view: God and the Lamb.

Alignment: (Lamb) x (God) x (7th→7) = (10) x (10) x (7) = 700

Literary Stature of the Heavenly Throne Scene = 70 + 7 + 700 = 777

“like a half-hour” | Following the convention observed elsewhere, a “half” of something involves two things being placed into the literary denominator, to be terminated, or as having been completed. Here, what two things are in view? From the immediate context, this point represents the completion of the second of two major sections. Each section contains a sevenfold series: the seven churches and the seven seals. The period “half-hour” may be a literary demarcation for the closure of these two sections: the age of the church and of the seals.

The period of “half-hour” may also correspond with the two-fold placement of the word “hour,” up to this point in Revelation (3:3, 3:10). Both instances point ahead to the end of the age, the “hour of trial” and the “hour” of Jesus’ coming (for judgment). The period of “half-hour” may indicate the closure of a two-fold age and the arrival of this hour of trial/judgment.

Finally, the first thousandfold in total literary count has been reached, at a mirroring point of the sealing of saints from the tribes of Israel. (continued...)

(continued...) This is the thousandfold literary stature of those who will be able to stand, by God's help, in the tribulations of earth. This mirror at the first thousandfold dovetails with a second mirror: the saints in heaven from throughout the age, from all nations, tribes, peoples, and languages. As a literary device, these two mirrors at the thousandfold interval may reflect dual thousandfold statures: two thousandfolds having been brought to completion at the last hour.

For this last possibility, such a device would be an inversion of a similar literary device in Daniel 8:14: a dual thousandfold measure reaching backward from the end of Daniel to 8:14, augmented by a hundredfold measure (having threefold significance) back to 7:28. Similarly here in Revelation, the (dual) thousandfold statures augment forward an additional hundred elements, to the end of the major section at Rev. 7:17. John may employ Daniel's measure "to end of the days" (Dan. 12:13), or as stated here: "because (there) has come, the day, the great, of their wrath! And who is able, to stand?" (Rev. 6:17).

Moving forward into the third major section of Revelation, the Apocalypse will progress from "the day, the great, of their wrath" to "the hour of His judgment" (Rev. 14:7) and "hour to reap" (14:15). Thus, the seventh seal introduces the final "hour" of the age, which is a literary reflection of the sixth seal.

(Rev. 8:1...)

“the seventh” | Judging by the completeness of literary sets, the Lamb is counted in the “heaven” subject column in this third major section.

The completion of the first two sections (Rev. 1:1 – 7:17) may be indicated by the “2” in the literary denominator of “half-hour” (see note, above). Now, a third section comes into view, and fraction “third” is featured repeatedly.

The series of trumpets appears to follow the same literary device for composite statures ranging from 111 to 777. God stands behind this context as the primary identity. The angels and the trumpets are presented via tenfold literary sets, allowing their identities to each rise into the composite statures. The angels and the trumpets are also numbered as sevenfold, allowing their cumulative sequences to be counted, like the seven seals.

First Trumpet

Source: (God) x (angel) x (1st → 1) = (10) x (10) x (1) = 100

Event: (trumpet) x (1st → 1) = (10) x (1) = 10

The first trumpet is a threefold calamity of hail, fire, and blood. These three means – hail, fire, and blood – by placement into the literary denominator, are experienced as the fraction “third” in the earthly realm.

Earthly Impact: The earthly impacts are threefold: a conflagration of a “third” of earth, a “third” of trees, and “all grass, green.” Judging by context and by the consistency of the series of literary composites, it appears the adjective green describes a literary 1/3 portion of all grass. This is the grass that is green (i.e., the growing season of the year) and not brown or dormant. Thus: (1/3) + (1/3) + (literary 1/3) = 1

Literary Stature of First Trumpet = 100 + 10 + 1 = 111

Second Trumpet

Source: (God) x (angel) x (2nd → 2) = (10) x (10) x (2) = 200

Event: (trumpet) x (2nd → 2) = (10) x (2) = 20

The second trumpet is a threefold calamity of “mountain, great” with “fire.” These three form the literary denominator for the fraction “third” being experienced in the earthly realm.

Earthly Impact: three instances of “third,” with twofold destructive outcome (creatures in the sea, ships in the sea). Thus:
 [(1/3) + (1/3) + (1/3)] x [2] = (1) x (2) = 2

Literary Stature of Second Trumpet = 200 + 20 + 2 = 222

[10] and the third angel trumpeted
 [1-2] and (there) fell from the heaven a star, great, burning like a lamp:
 [5-6] and it fell upon the third of the rivers and upon the springs of waters
 [7-8] and the name of the star is called Wormwood [Apsinthos]
 [9-10] and (there) became, the third of the waters, into wormwood
 [1-2] and many of people died from the waters that were made bitter

[3] and the fourth angel trumpeted
 [4] and (there) was struck, the third of the sun
 [5-6] and the third of the moon, and the third of the stars
 [7] in order that, (there) might be darkened, the third of them
 [8-9] and the day might not shine – the third of it –
 [10] and the night likewise

[2] and I saw
 [3] and I heard

[1] one eagle flying in mid-heaven
 [2-3] saying with a voice, great:
 [4-6] woe, woe, woe! –
 [3] those dwelling upon the earth –
 [7-9] from the rest of voices of the trumpet of the three angels of the, being about, to trumpet

[10] and the fifth angel trumpeted (Rev. 9:1...)

[4] and I saw
 [4] a star (that was) from the heaven,
 [5] having fallen to the earth
 [6] and (there) was given to him the key of the pit of the abyss
 [7] and he opened the pit of the abyss
 [8] and (there) went up smoke from the pit
 [9-10] like smoke of a furnace, great

[1-2] and (there) were darkened, the sun and the air, from the smoke of the pit
 [3] and from the smoke went out locusts into the earth
 [4] and (there) was given to them, power
 [5] as have power, the scorpions of the earth
 [6] and (there) was told to them
 [7] that they will not harm the grass of the earth
 [8] neither everything green
 [9] neither every tree
 [10] but only the people¹ who do not have the seal of God upon their foreheads

Locusts 1

Third Trumpet

Source: (God) x (angel) x (3rd → 3) = (10) x (10) x (3) = 300

Event: (trumpet) x (3rd → 3) = (10) x (3) = 30

The third trumpet is a threefold calamity of a “star, great,” having a “name.” (The name, in the earthly realm, is called “Wormwood.”) These three form the literary denominator for the fraction “third” being experienced in the earthly realm.

Earthly Impact: the fraction “third” affects rivers, springs of water, and their fresh waters in general. This calamity has a threefold destructive outcome: rivers struck, springs struck, and many people die. (Note the repeat of the verb fell, which reflects the impact within the earthly realm.) Thus: [(1/3) + (1/3) + (1/3)] x [threefold destruction] = (1) x (3) = 3

Literary Stature of Third Trumpet = 300 + 30 + 3 = 333

Fourth Trumpet

Source: (God) x (angel) x (4th → 4) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

Event: (trumpet) x (4th → 4) x [(1/3) + (1/3) + (1/3)] = (10) x (4) x (1) = 40

The fourth trumpet is a threefold calamity: the striking of sun, moon, and stars. As these are heavenly bodies, and judging by the completeness of the literary sets, these elements are represented in the “heaven” subject column. It is for this reason that the threefold calamity is reflected in the literary denominator as the fraction “third” for the striking of sun, moon, and stars. The fraction “third” is also reflected in the impact component that follows.

Heavenly Impact: the fraction “third” affects the light of celestial bodies in general (“the third of them”) and the light of day and of night specifically. The restatement “the day might not shine – the third of it” has the effect of doubling this instance, as measured by the literary count. Therefore, the outcome is fourfold: (celestial bodies generally) + (day)(2x) + (night). Thus: [(1/3) + (1/3) + (1/3)] x (fourfold impact) = (1) x (4) = 4

Locusts 3

Locusts 5

“months, five” | This phrase is expressed in (quantity | unit) format in both passive (“will be tormented”) and active (“(is) their power to harm the people”) voices. As with other instances, this format may indicate hidden meaning. This format is expressed twice among the five literary sets for the locusts: in sets two and five. The format is not reversed in the second instance to provide an explanation. It appears the literary format is meant to coincide with the literary measure: “months, five” is reflected in five literary sets for the locusts, as shown. The unit “month” is used here in the way “month” is used in Daniel: a measure that corresponds with a tenfold set.

Fifth Trumpet (First Woe)

Source: (God) x (angel) x (5th → 5) = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

Event: (trumpet) x (5th → 5) = (10) x (5) = 50

The power of the locusts is an extension of the rule of fallen star Abaddon-Apollyon, their king. They have power “to harm” (active voice) for months, five against the earth dwellers. As noted above, the 50-fold component stature may also be reflected in the (5x) tenfold literary sets for the locusts.

Earthly Impact: Earth dwellers sustain harm (passive voice) for months, five. These earth dwellers are identified with fivefold instances of the word “people” here. Because the locusts will have “faces like faces of people,” confusion and deception may abound during this fivefold period of fallen angelic dominion over fallen humanity. Thus, impact = 5.

Literary Stature of Fifth Trumpet = 500 + 50 + 5 = 555

“will seek, the people, Thanatos [death]” | Thanatos, the angel of death and of hades in the fourth seal, has fulfilled his quota for visiting a fourth of humanity with untimely death. Now, even as people seek “the Thanatos,” he has fled away and cannot be found. Instead, a new angelic ruler has jurisdiction over the earth dwellers: Apollyon, angel of the abyss, tormentor. Apollyon, as it were, sends Thanatos running.

Sixth Trumpet (Second Woe)

Source: (God) x (angel) x (6th → 6) = (10) x (10) x (6) = 600Event: (trumpet) x (6th → 6) = (10) x (6) = 60

The calamity of this sixth trumpet returns to the common metric of the first four: here, a threefold calamity, stated twice, having sixfold effect. The threefold calamity is expressed as “fire and smoke and sulfur.” These three plagues form the literary denominator for the fraction “third” experienced in the death of people. The sixfold effect may also be reflected in the combination of four angels being loosed + two myriads of myriads of troops of cavalry: [(four) x (tenfold identities)] + [(two) x (tenfold identities)] = 60.

Earthly Impact: A third of the earth dwellers (“people”) die. From a literary standpoint, the number “third” is stated twice, establishing (2x) threefold literary denominators. This design reflects (2x) threefold impacts to these earth dwellers: the doubled “fire and smoke and sulfur.” The impact of death may also be reflected in the sixfold spiritual deadness indicated toward the end of this passage. The earth dwellers worship demons + fivefold idols (gold, silver, bronze, stone, and wood). Thus: impact = 6.

Literary Stature of Sixth Trumpet = 600 + 60 + 6 = 666

“gold...silver...bronze...stone...wood” | This idol materials list is similar to the one stated twice in Daniel 5, at Belshazzar’s Feast.

42 elements

“(there) spoke, the seven thunders” | These thunders occur within the literary space of the sixth trumpet (Rev. 9:13 – 11:14) and in anticipation of the “days of the voice of the seventh angel... about to trumpet.” John has “sealed” the thunder voices, a phrase that may echo Daniel 12:4. In Daniel, the content was written down but was sealed, perhaps, by the variety of literary devices. Here, the content isn’t written down, but it is “sealed”... by similar literary devices? Notice the literary mirroring that frames this passage about a reflection point. The vision shifts back to the mighty angel whose great voice initiated the seven thunders. Time and mystery are in focus: the fulfillment of mystery = the end of time. See further comments at Rev. 14:2.

“lifted his hand, the right, to the heaven” | The angel lifts his right hand, perhaps as an echo of Daniel 12:7. Notice the parallelism with the earlier literary set: “his foot, the right, upon the sea...”

“take the scroll” | Perhaps as a matter of perspective, the scroll is considered to be “a scroll” from the heavenly vantage, but from John’s earthly/visionary vantage it’s consistently a “mini-scroll.”

“rise and measure the temple of God and the altar” | John has been given “a reed like a scepter” to perform the measurements. The measurements that are given in context are time measurements: a measure of months and a measure of days. These measurements are reflected as cross-references in the macrostructure of the Apocalypse. See illustration, p. 3.

“months, forty (and) two” | This measure is formatted as (unit | quantity) for hidden meaning. John has been commanded not to measure “the courtyard which (is) outside of the temple.” But the measure he is given here is a measure of the trampling of “the city, the holy.”

- The measure “forty (and) two” may be reflected in the 42-fold local mirroring device for this city, like the local mirroring for the new Jerusalem, Rev. 21-22 (a 144-fold mirror). In this mirroring device, the measure of 42 elements is carried on the line “months, forty,” as well as being mirrored on both sides. This line may represent the door of the holy city being trampled on earth. This line is also the midpoint between the 152-fold literary binder for major section 2 → 3 and the 238-fold literary binder for major section 4 → 5. Similar devices will be observed for Babylon (Rev. 18:2) the heavenly city (Rev. 21:17).
- The measure may be a literary composite, composed as four tenfold identities working side-by-side to give over two things: “peoples and tribes and tongues and nations” (40-fold) celebrating the “corpses” (2x) of the two witnesses = (40) + (2) = 42.
- The measure “months, forty (and) two” is also a broad-reaching literary cross reference (see illustration, p. 3).

“days, thousand two-hundred sixty” | This composite measure is formatted as (unit | quantity). It may be composed as follows:

- Days thousand. Three tenfold identities are aligned in the near context. John has been commissioned to measure. A mighty angel has commissioned him. The object being measured is the temple “of God.” Thus, (God) x (Mighty Angel) x (John) = (10) x (10) x (10) = 1000
- Two-hundred. Two tenfold identities are aligned: the two witnesses. The use of “two” conveys a doubled value of the witness:
 (2-fold witness) x (witness 1) x (witness 2) = (2) x (10) x (10) = 200
- Sixty. These are sixfold identities ascribed to the two witnesses:
 two olive-trees, two lampstands, two prophets = (6-fold) x (10) = 60
- In total: 1000 + 200 + 60 = 1260
- The measure “days, thousand two-hundred sixty” is also a broad-reaching literary cross reference (see illustration, p. 3).

“and when they should finish their witness” | In Smyrna, the theme of death and resurrection was prominent. Smyrna was the second church and had a literary stature of 222. Smyrna may be a spiritual prototype and literary source for the two witnesses = two olive trees | two lampstands | two prophets here in Rev. 11. The church at Philadelphia may have also been in view as it participates in the same cross-referencing measure.

“the wide-place of the city” | This phrase may be an echo of the “wide (gathering) place” of Daniel 9:25. See notes there.

“days, three and a half” | This phrase is formatted as (unit | quantity). The reflection of this phrase, from just below, is in (quantity | unit) format in keeping with the more typical counting of cardinals and of nouns: “after three days and a half.” The hidden meaning should be found between the phrase and its reflection. “Half” typically indicates two things placed into the literary denominator for completion or for destruction. In the present case, two things are destroyed: the two witnesses. The quantity “three” may be reflected in the threefold jubilee of the earth dwellers (rejoice, celebrate, give gifts), which corresponds with the threefold instance of “corpses” in the immediate context.

“come here” | This is the same phrase as was used in Rev. 4:1, when John initially entered the heavenly realm for his vision. The phrase spans from Greek “alpha” to “O” (omega), the first letter of each word. It indicates the glorification of the two witnesses: their ascension from the time-bound realm to the realm of the eternal God.

“tenth of the city fell” (next page) | As with other fractional values, “tenth” may indicate ten things (or one tenfold identity) being placed into the literary denominator for destruction. The nearest tenfold narrative-identity set is that of the earth dwellers who celebrate the death of God’s witnesses (elements 1 – 6), then experience great fear as the witnesses are raised to life and ascend to the heavenly realm. It may be these very enemies – the “city” that opposes the Lord and His people – who fall into destruction here. The judgment is amplified by a (unit | quantity) measure, discussed below.

 [4] and to those fearing Your name
 [5-6] the small and the great
 [7] and to destroy
 [4] those destroying the earth
 [8-9] and (there) was opened, the temple of God which (was) in the heaven
 [10] and (there) was seen, the ark of His covenant in His temple

[5-8] and there were lightnings and voices and thunders and an earthquake
 [9-10] and hail, great

(...Rev. 11:19)

“names of people, thousands, seven” | The use of thousand here may indicate three tenfold identities aligned for sevenfold judgment. It may also be seven tenfold identities aligned with two tenfold identities (70 x 10 x 10). The clue in this mystery number may be “names of people.” The nearest instance of names being given are the names Sodom and Egypt with reference to the “city” that opposes the Lord. Negative names of people used thus far in Revelation are these: (1-2) Nicolaitans, (3-4) Balaam-Balak, (5) Jezebel, (6) Sodom, and (7) Egypt. The two literary identities aligned spiritually with these negative names may be (1) Satan and (2) the Beast. These names may represent a 7,000-fold judgment of the fallen realm: the dark spiritual fabric that stands behind these people who oppose the Lord.

Seventh Trumpet (third woe)

Source: (God) x (angel) x (7th → 7) = (10) x (10) x (7) = 700

Event: (trumpet) x (7th → 7) = (10) x (7) = 70

This component stature may be reflected in a sevenfold focus upon the divine identity:

- “of our Lord and of His Christ” (10 + 10)
- “Lord, the God, the Almighty” (10 + 10 + 10)
- “the existing and the, He was” (10 + 10) = 70-fold

Impacts: This section ending features sevenfold impacts in both the heavenly and earthly realms:

- Heavenly: There came... “the appointed time of the dead to be judged and to give the reward to Your servants, to the prophets and to the saints, and to those fearing Your name, the small and the great” = 7
- Earthly: There came “Your wrath”... and there were lightnings and voices and thunders and an earthquake and hail, great” = 7

Literary Stature of Seventh Trumpet = 700 + 70 + 7 = 777

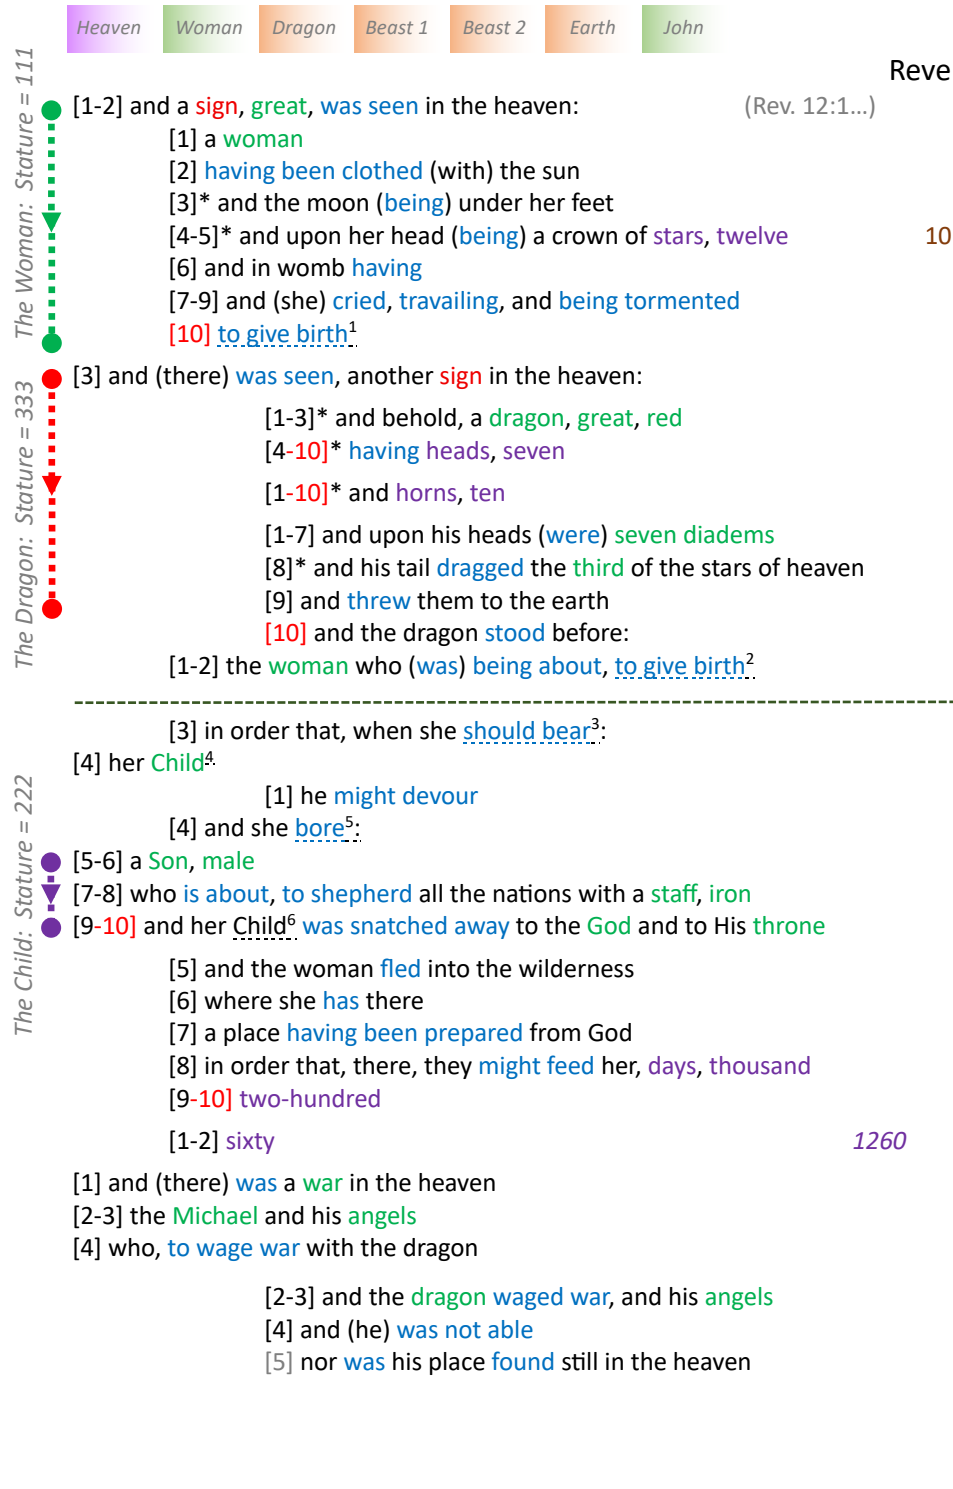

With the seventh trumpet, the focus comes to the very end of the age: the “days of the voice of the seventh angel... about to trumpet,” when “time no longer will be.” Looking ahead, the heavenly calamities caused by the seventh trumpet may be the seven bowl judgments of chapter 15, where this third “woe” may be declared 3 times, with doubled significance (3x “woe, woe” declared by earth-dwellers, following God’s “repay her double”). The count of “woe” is teed up to sevenfold by the inclusion of the singular “woe, the earth and the sea, because (there) came down, the Devil, to you” in the intervening section of ch. 12-14. Thus: (1) + (3 x 2) = 7-fold “woe.”

Revelation 12 – 14

“under her feet” | As elsewhere, context determines literary count. Here, a singular object is in view beneath her feet. Literary count = 1 element.

“a crown of stars, twelve” | These stars are formatted in (unit | quantity). These stars may reprise the stars = sons of Israel from Joseph’s second vision, Gen. 37:9 (see notes there). The quantity will be counted similarly here in Revelation: ten and two. The ten is carried as a special number for the literary count at the end of the section.

“a dragon, great, red” | For the literary composite stature of this dragon, 333, see next page. Notice that the dragon is presented out of sequence.

“heads seven and horns ten” | These aspects of the dragon are in (unit | quantity) format. See the inverse description of the beast of the sea, below.

“seven diadems” | These seven diadems may be reflected in the sevenfold identity description of the dragon (below): “the dragon, the great, the serpent, the ancient, the being called ‘Devil’ and ‘the Satan,’ the deceiving the world, whole. Although “the deceiving the world, whole” is counted as two literary elements, the participle deceiving is the seventh in a series of words having the definite article in this refrain of the dragon’s identity.

“days thousand two-hundred sixty” | See discussion, bottom of this section, for the formation of the literary composite from the context here.

The Woman

The woman is presented with a single word: woman. Her tenfold identity follows. She derives her identity from heaven, from which the great sign is given. Thus:

$$(\text{Heaven}) \times (\text{Woman}) = (10) \times (10) = 100$$

The woman’s existence has a singular focus: giving birth. Thus:

$$(\text{Woman}) \times (1 \text{ action}) = (10) \times (1) = 10$$

One thing has been given to the woman: a Child. Thus: 1

Literary Stature: $100 + 10 + 1 = 111$

The Child

The Child is presented with two words: Son, male. His tenfold identity proceeds. He derives His identity from God. Thus: $(\text{God}) \times (\text{Child}) \times (2\text{-fold}) = (10) \times (10) \times (2) = 200$

The Child’s existence has a twofold focus: shepherd nations with a “staff, iron.” Thus:

$$(\text{Child}) \times (\text{twofold action}) = (10) \times (2) = 20$$

A twofold deliverance has been given: snatched away to “God and to His throne.” Thus: 2

Literary Stature: $200 + 20 + 2 = 222$

The Dragon

The dragon is presented with three words, above: dragon, great, red. His tenfold identity follows. He derives his identity from heaven, from which the “another sign” is given. (Heaven) x (Dragon) x (3-fold) = (10) x (10) x (3) = 300

The dragon’s description has three prominent features: heads, horns, and diadems, each being numbered. Thus: (Dragon) x (3 features) = (10) x (3) = 30

A threefold influence has been given to the dragon for dragging down a third of heaven’s stars, ultimately for their destruction. Thus: 3

Literary Stature: 300 + 30 + 3 = 333

The dragon’s 333 composite stature is presented prior to that of the Child’s 222 composite stature. This out-of-sequence literary device may cue the presence of the major structural feature in this immediate context: the literary cross-references for 210 elements (backwards) and 1260 elements (both directions).

“appointed time and appointed times and half of an appointed time” | This measure may find its literary origins in Dan. 12:7, where the phrase was “an appointed time, appointed times, and a half.” (See notes there.) Here, the endpoint of history has loomed large enough that it is viewed as a small window of time which may be divided in half.

- Appointed time. This phrase has its nearest parallel in the description of the dragon’s “little appointed time.” This is the final window of time in which the dragon, having been thrown down to earth, pursues Lady Israel to fight against her children.
- Appointed times. In Daniel, this phrase may have a literary basis in sevenfold “appointed times” of focused and faithful prayer. Here, the means of grace for God’s people is that they will be “fed” in the wilderness. From further in the context, this feeding may consist of the “commandments of God” and the “testimony of Jesus.” God’s words will be preserved in the hearts and lives of God’s people as by regular, abiding engagement, perhaps like the eating of manna in the wilderness for sevenfold days in the week.
- Half of an appointed time. The word “half” typically indicates two things being placed into the literary denominator for completion or destruction. In this case, the nearest two things are the “two wings of the eagle, the great” – the means of escape for refuge for God’s people. These wings of refuge protect God’s people for completion, “away from face of the serpent.”

"horns, ten, and heads, seven" | The quantities of horns and of heads are formatted as (unit | quantity). They are in the inverse sequence from those of the dragon, above. The quantities are identical to those of the dragon.

"ten diadems" | Whereas the dragon has his seven diadems upon his seven heads, the beast has his ten diadems upon his ten horns. The ten diadems may be reflected in the literary chorus of five couplets:

- 1-2 Worship: "Who is like the beast? And who is able to fight with it?"
- 3-4 Mouth: "speaking great (things) and blasphemies"
- 5-6 Authority: "months forty and two"
- 7-8 Blasphemies toward God: "His name and His dwelling"
- 9-10 Power: "to make war with the saints and to conquer them"

The Beast of the Sea

The Beast of the Sea is presented with a fourfold description: horns, heads, diadems, and names. He derives his identity from the dragon, from whom his description is reflected. (Dragon) x (Beast) x (4 features) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

The beast is distinguished by his blasphemy, a word used with four instances of noun and verb forms (see superscripts). This is the beast's prominent work. Thus: (Beast) x (fourfold work) = (10) x (4) = 40

The dragon "gave" (active voice) fourfold to this beast: his power (1x), his throne (1x), and his authority, great (2x). The twofold literary significance of the dragon's giving his "authority, great" is reflected in the repeated phrase, "because he gave authority to the beast." In contrast, using the passive voice John typically uses to indicate divine appointment and control, four things are "given" to this beast by the unspecified Giver. These four things are: (1) a mouth, (2) authority to work, (3) to make war with the saints and to conquer them, and (4) authority over every tribe, people, language, and nation. In keeping with the general pattern, the four things given by the Divine Giver may be in view. Thus, 4 Literary Stature: 400 + 40 + 4 = 444

This literary stature is the beast's initial stature in this passage. It is not to be confused with his stature in union with reimagined humanity, 666, below.

"months forty and two" | This composite may be composed as follows:

- In addition to the fourfold description mentioned above for the 444 literary stature, the Beast of the Sea is given another fourfold description: (1) like a leopard; (2-3) feet like a bear; (4) mouth like a lion. Thus: (Beast) x (fourfold description) = (10) x (40) = 40.
- As noted above, there may be five couplets that constitute the beast's ten diadems. In addition, his conquest leads to twofold devastation among saints: (being taken into captivity) + (being killed by sword) = 2.
- Thus: (40) + (2) = 42

420 to sixth plague, gathering of kings for war (Rev. 16:17)

The Beast of the Earth

The Beast of the Earth is presented with a fivefold description: (1-2) "horns two"; (3) dragon words; (4-5) "authority... all." He derives his identity from the dragon, who remains standing where sea and land meet. Thus:

(Dragon) x (Beast of the Earth) x (5 features) = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

The Beast of the Earth proceeds to do five things:

- Makes the earth worship the first beast
- Does great signs
- Makes fire come down from heaven
- Makes saints be killed when they don't worship the image
- Makes all earth-dwellers receive a mark

Thus: (Beast of the Earth) x (fivefold activity) = (10) x (5) = 50

What is given over to this Beast of the Earth? Fivefold Humanity = 5

- Earth-dwellers who will worship the first beast
- Earth-dwellers who are deceived by the signs given to this beast
- Earth-dwellers who obey the word to make an image of the first beast
- Earth-dwellers who receive a demonic spirit via the image of the first beast in themselves, and speak for him (see discussion below)
- Saints who are killed for not participating in beast worship.

Literary Stature: 500 + 50 + 5 = 555

For possible parallels between the Beasts of Sea and Earth and the kings of Daniel 10-12, see notes on "kings, seven" in Rev. 17.

"the having been slain from foundation of world" | The fivefold literary half-set indicates the death of this subject: the Lamb of God.

"horns two" | The second beast is modeled to resemble both lamb and dragon. The "horns two" are formatted as (unit | quantity). These horns do not appear to be two overt manifestations of power, e.g., as by two kings (see Dan. 7:24). Rather, they appear to be the literary twofold influence of deception. The means of this deception are given twice here: "signs, great" and "the signs that were given to it."

This double-impact deception results in humanity being reimagined after the first beast. Humanity makes the image. As the image is enlivened and empowered by the demonic spirit, the image speaks. This activity of the image appears to be counted within the earth-dwellers' subject column. If so, humanity itself becomes the image of the first beast. This reimagining process is completed with the giving of the mark: an irreversible unification with Satan's host, and an irreversible distortion of God's image in humanity.

The Beast of the Sea in union with his Reimagined Humans

“six-hundred sixty six” | The “six-hundred” is in the beast’s literary column, and the “sixty” and “six” are in the earth dwellers’ column. This literary design reflects the deceptive sense of unity that binds the beast with his followers:

- Six-hundred. This number represents two aligned identities having sixfold expression. The two aligned identities are the beast of the sea (“Beast 1”) and the dragon who gives it identity. The sixfold expression of this satanic union is described here as “the name of the beast.” Keeping our focus upon the literary format for composite numbers, we are looking for a name value of six, not 666. The beast’s name is, in fact, beast. In Greek, the word has six letters. Given the examples in Dan. 3 (instruments) and Dan. 5 (mystery words), it is not surprising that John would find literary value in individual letters. (This approach is not gematria, the calculating of a word’s numerical value by recognizing different numerical values of individual letters, an art not observed thus far in Scripture.) Thus:
 $(\text{Dragon}) \times (\text{Beast of Sea}) \times (6\text{-lettered name}) = (10) \times (10) \times (6) = 600$
- Sixty. This number represents one tenfold identity doing six things, or six tenfold identities each doing one thing. Here, the tenfold identity may be that of the image of the beast: humanity reimagined into the beast’s image. This distorted humanity is described as “the small and the great and the rich and the poor and the free and the slave” = sixfold humanity. Thus:
 $(\text{Image of Beast in Humanity}) \times (\text{Sixfold Humanity}) = (10) \times (6) = 60$
- Six. This number represents six things given over. In this case, the deluded earth dwellers surrender a literary sixfold to the beast: either their right hand (five-fingered) or their forehead (1x). Thus:
 $(\text{Hand, right}) + (\text{Forehead}) = (5) + (1) = 6$
- Literary Stature: $600 + 60 + 6 = 666$. Note that this composite number is described as the “number of the beast” (not the “number of its name”). The authentication mark upon reimagined humanity will be either the beast’s six-lettered name or the number of that name: a sixfold mark.

“and with Him a hundred forty-four thousand” | This composite number is mirrored about the second thousandfold in total literary count, below:

- Hundred forty four. This number reflects two factors of twelve. First, “stars, twelve.” See discussion toward the beginning of this section for the identification of these stars with the twelve tribes of Israel. Second, the balance of the “elders” who are mentioned here: twelve apostles. Thus: $(\text{“Stars, twelve”}) \times (\text{remainder of “elders”}) = (12) \times (12) = 144$
- Thousand. Three identities are aligned: (Father) \times (Lamb) \times (Redeemed) $= (10) \times (10) \times (10) = 1,000$
- Taken together: $(144) \times (1,000) = 144,000$

Revelation 12 – 14

The Lamb in union with His reimagined humans

John sees the Lamb in union with His sevenfold redeemed humanity. Following from the dual instances of 144,000: (1-2) Lamb's name and Father's name written upon foreheads, (3) redeemed from earth, (4) undefiled/ virgins, (5) following the Lamb, (6) redeemed as first fruits, (7) no lie in them/ blameless. This 700-fold component is mirrored about the 2000th literary element. Thus:

$$(\text{Father}) \times (\text{Lamb}) \times (\text{sevenfold humanity}) = (10) \times (10) \times (7) = 700$$

What work proceeds from this union? From within the inclusio of the dual instances of 144,000, and mirrored about the 2000th literary element of the Apocalypse, is the voice of Jesus and His people singing together. This voice is described with sevenfold significance. The voice is: (1) heavenly; (2-3) like waters, many; (4-5) like thunder, great; (6-7) like harpists, playing harps. Thus:

$$(\text{Singers}) \times (\text{sevenfold singing voice}) = (10) \times (7) = 70$$

Jesus and His people sing a song. The song has sevenfold significance: (1-2) a song, new, before the throne; (3-6) and before the four creatures; (7) and (before) the elders. The song is something being given. For the composite literary stature, the song is reflected in the digits place: (sevenfold song) = 7

$$\text{Literary Stature: } (700) + (70) + (7) = 777$$

On the parallel structuring with the Genesis flood narrative, see the breakdown for thousandfold elements in the table for the Genesis study. The second thousandfold in the flood narrative occurs from Gen. 8:2b to 9:10a. This thousandfold in Genesis concludes with a mirroring of God establishing His covenant with all living things exiting the ark (Mount Ararat). In the same context, God also gives a sign of His covenant: a rainbow.

Here in Revelation, the second thousandfold of total literary count is indicated with the cyan dashed line. The mirroring point emphasizes the covenant identity of God's people: those having been marked by God's name, having been redeemed from the earth, and having been transferred safely into God's presence. The second thousandfold ends with God's covenant (His name) being upon His people who have escaped to the presence of the Lamb (Mount Zion). The context is worship around the throne, where the heavenly rainbow is located (see Rev. 4:3).

Notice that of the descriptors of the sevenfold voice, "thunder, great" is the descriptor that precedes the mirroring point. This may be a literary parallel to the "seven thunders" at Rev. 10:4, which precede the mirroring point in that local context. Here at Rev. 14:2-3, the sevenfold song that is being sung may be the content of the "seven thunders" from Rev. 10:4 – content that was not written down there but was nonetheless "sealed" by John. John may also have indicated the outcomes of the "seven thunders" (Rev. 10:4) and the sevenfold song (Rev. 14:2-3) by... (Continued)

(Continued) ...placing seven instances of a “voice, great” in the span of this broader context. “Voice, great” may be related to the “voice, great, like a lion, roaring” of Rev. 10:3, which precipitated the “seven thunders.” “Voice, great” may also be related to the “voice of thunder, great” from the present context. These seven instances of “voice, great” are as follows:

- 1) “a voice, great, from the heaven, saying to them, ‘come here’” (Rev. 11:12). This voice calls the two, freshly resurrected witnesses to enter God’s heavenly presence. (These two witnesses may be the faithful saints throughout the age, exemplified in the churches at Smyrna and Philadelphia, by literary cross-reference.)
- 2) “and there were voices, great, in the heaven, saying, ‘(there) has become, the kingdom of (the) world, of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign to the ages of ages’” (Rev. 11:15). This voice is the immediate result of the seventh trumpet: the point at which “time no longer will be” and “is fulfilled, the mystery of God” (Rev. 10:7).
- 3) “a voice, great, in the heaven, saying, ‘now is the salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God and the authority of our Christ’” (Rev. 12:10). This “voice, great” is a commentary on the “sign, great” that opened the present major section (Rev. 12:1).
- 4) “another angel... saying with a voice, great, ‘fear the God and give Him glory...’” (Rev. 14:7). This angel proclaims “good news, eternal.”
- 5) “another angel, a third... saying with a voice, great...” (this page). This angel proclaims a warning of eternal torment.
- 6) “another angel came out from the temple, calling with a voice, great” (Rev. 14:15, next page). This angel calls for the reaping of the saints.
- 7) “another angel (came out) from the altar, (the) having authority over the fire, and he shouted with a voice, great” (Rev. 14:18, next page). This angel calls for the reaping of earth’s sinners.

“engrave” | This command from heaven is in second person singular: “You engrave (write, record).” The Person who answers this imperative is the Spirit of God! “Yes!” says the Spirit. It appears that it is the Spirit who will do the engraving of these words in the hearts, the lives, and especially the deaths of God’s people. The imperative “engrave” does not appear to be directed to John, because this literary element exceeds the tenfold count of John’s single set in this section. Rather, the imperative is reflected in the heavenly subject column, for the Spirit’s action. If this is so, the “engraving” of these words in the lives of God’s people may be a literary counterpart to the mark of the beast. The Spirit will give God’s remnant people a heightened awareness of the happiness that awaits them on the other side of the veil of death. This will not be a suicidal tendency, but instead a great eagerness for resurrection and the glory that awaits.

Two Greek words are used exactly ten times in this section: “who/what/which” and “voice.” Taken together, these words may form a literary title for this section: Which voice?

As noted earlier in this section, it appears the sevenfold “thunder” voice corresponds with the “seven thunders” of Rev. 10:4, by the parallel in literary mirroring points. By extension, the content of the “seven thunders,” sealed as it was in Rev. 10, may be carried in the sevenfold song sung by the hundred forty-four thousand here in Rev. 14. This is a song that “no one was able, to learn...,” from among the earth-dwellers (by subject column). The outcome of the “seven thunders” and the sevenfold song may be the seven instances of a “voice, great,” as noted above. These seven instances of “voice, great” carry the range from the resurrection/glorification/celebration of the saints, to the... (continued)

“and (there) was trampled, the winepress, outside the city” | Judging by the completeness of literary sets, it appears the unnamed subject is actually the saints. If so, this finding accords with passages such as Psalm 149.

“stadia thousand six-hundred” | This measure in (unit | quantity) format. From the immediate context, two angelic beings are instrumental in this harvest of the ungodly earth dwellers. The first is the angel having a sickle, whose sickle is mentioned four times, perhaps reflecting the universal reach of this harvest in the earthly realm. The second is the angel “from the altar” in heaven, who has authority over the fire in the altar. The heavenly altar is a four-horned altar (see Rev. 9:13), perhaps indicating the universal reach of the heavenly judgment forthcoming. Thus:

$$\begin{aligned} &(\text{angel with sickle}) \times (\text{literary 4-fold "sickle"}) \times (\text{angel of fire}) \times (4\text{-fold altar}) \\ &= (10) \times (4) \times (10) \times (4) = 1600 \end{aligned}$$

The Greek word stadion (plural “stadia”) used here is the basis for the word stadium. One stadion would be roughly the length around a racetrack for foot races or for horse races. The picture here may be of a Roman/Greek stadium being used as the judgment place, the “winepress,” in which the forces of God’s judgment are riding upon horses and are trampling God’s enemies. It may be a 1600-fold blood bath due to the merging of heavenly and earthly universalities, with the blood rising “up to the bridles of the horses” in the stadium.

In this section, the 144000 are mentioned twice. In the first instance, they are identified as “having His name and the name of His Father having been written upon their foreheads.” In the second instance, which is separated by a literary mirroring point, the 144000 are identified as “having been redeemed from the earth” and as having other aspects of worthiness. Because of the unique descriptions of the 144000 in these two instances, and because of the intervening mirroring point, both instances are counted literarily as being heavenly numbers. See the table, below.

(continued) ...present operation of God's kingdom throughout the church age (the "sign, great" of Rev. 12), to the proclamation of the gospel and of the coming judgment, to the respective harvests of saints and of sinners. These are the sevenfold outcomes of the seventh trumpet. The Apostle John, one of the "sons of thunder" (Mark 3:17), was uniquely qualified to speak (and to "seal") this subject.

"days thousand two-hundred sixty" | This is the same (unit | quantity) as was the period of prophesying by God's two witnesses. Here, the measure appears to be the literary stature of God's people under God's protection:

- Days thousand two-hundred. The woman is distinguished as having a crown of stars, twelve. The previous section ended with a reprisal of Psalm 2 ("the nations raged, and came, Your wrath"). Here, Lady Israel is privileged to bring forth the messianic Son, one who will "shepherd all the nations with a staff, iron." The connection with messianic prophecy may identify these stars, twelve with the twelve tribes of Israel, not the twelve apostles (see also Gen. 37:9). In Rev. 7, these twelve tribes were named. In Rev. 7 and in the present context, it is "God" who is instrumental in Israel's deliverance. Here, God has prepared the place for her to live while awaiting glory. Thus: (God) x (Lady Israel) x (Stars, Twelve) = (10) x (10 x 12) = 1,200
- Sixty. Here, the focus may be upon Lady Israel and upon her Son. The noun form "child" and the verb form "to give birth" (i.e., to child) are of the same Greek root and sound similar. They are used together a total of six times in this immediate context (see the superscript counting). Thus: (Lady Israel) x (sixfold "Child") = (10) x (6) = 60
- In total: 1,200 + 60 = 1,260. The use of "days," in contrast to "months," may again indicate the activity of God's people.

As shown in the table on the following page, this instance of "days thousand two-hundred sixty" occurs 210 literary elements from the first instance of this measure, Rev. 11:3. In Rev. 11:3, the measure was given in the context of two witnesses prophesying. As a literary device, the dual nature of the witness may amplify the measure from 210-fold to 420-fold. The 420-fold corresponds with the value of "months forty and two" using the literary conversion: 10 literary elements | 1 literary month. This measure then corresponds with 1260 days using the calendar conversion: 1 month | 30 days.

Literary Period: 42 months = 420 literary elements					Literary Period = (2 witnesses) x (210 elements) = 420 elements = 42 months = 1,260 days (30/mo.)	210	1260	Literary Cross-Reference: Deliverance from the "small time" of Satan's final work (Rev. 20:9)	Literary Cross-Reference: The heavenly vindication for martyred saints (Rev. 19:4)	Answer to question, "until when" (Rev. 6:10)	Two witnesses prophesy, " days, thousand two-hundred sixty " (Rev. 11:3)

[1] and I saw
 [1] another sign in the heaven
 [2-3] great and wonderful:
 [4-10]* angels, seven
 [1-7]* having plagues, seven
 [8] the last, because in them is finished, the wrath of God
 [2] and I saw
 [9-10] like a sea, glass:
 [1] having been mingled with fire
 [2-4] and those conquering from the beast and from its image and from the number of its name
 [5-6] having stood at the sea, the glass
 [7] having harps of the God
 [8-9] and they sing the song of Moses, the servant of the God
 [10] and the song of the Lamb, saying:
 [1-2] great and wonderful (are) Your works, Lord,
 [3-4] the God, the Almighty
 [5-6] just and true (are) Your ways, O King of the nations
 [7-8] who would not fear, Lord, and glorify Your name?
 [9] because (You) alone (are) holy
 [10] because all the nations will come
 [1] and they will worship before You
 [2] because Your righteousnesses appeared
 [3] and after that I saw
 [3] and (there) was opened, the sanctuary of the tent of witness in the heaven
 [4-10] and (there) came out, the seven angels
 [1-7] (the) having the seven plagues, from the sanctuary
 [8-10] having been clothed (with) linen, pure, bright
 [1-2] and having been wrapped around the chests (with) sashes, golden
 [3] and purple from the four creatures gave,
 [4-10] to the seven angels,
 [1-7] seven bowls
 [8] golden, having been filled (with) the wrath of God –
 [9-10] the, living to the ages of ages

(Rev. 15:1...)

“angels, seven having plagues, seven” | These angels and plagues are presented in (unit | quantity) format and are described as a “sign.” Further down the page, the sanctuary of the heavenly tent of witness is “opened,” and out come “the seven angels having the seven plagues.” With the unveiling of these seven angels and their seven plagues, the literary format is inversed to (quantity | unit). What is instrumental in this literary inversion? It appears to be the singing of saints, which is the intervening content. Specifically, it is their song of victory and of worship: the song of Moses and of the Lamb. Perhaps this song is the same as the one being sung by the 144,000 in the previous section and in the seventh bowl (below).

In this passage, the seven angels, seven bowls, and seven plagues are each numbered. It appears the literary composite statures for this section are formed as follows, in keeping with the progression from the seals (one numbered sevenfold) and trumpets (two numbered sevenfolds):

- (Great voice) x (Angel) x (sequencing number, cumulative)
- (God’s wrath) x (sequencing number, for bowl, cumulative)
- (sequencing number, for plague, cumulative)

[1-2] and (there) was filled, the sanctuary, of smoke from the glory of God and from His power

[3] and no one was able –

[4-10] to enter into the sanctuary until, (there) would be finished, the seven plagues

[1-7] of the seven angels (...Rev. 15:8)

[4] and I heard (Rev. 16:1...)

[8] a great voice from the sanctuary, saying to the seven angels:

[1] go!

[2-8] and pour out the seven bowls of the wrath of the God into the earth

[9] and (there) went, the first

[10] and he poured out his bowl into the earth:

[1-2] and it became a sore,

[3-4] harmful and evil, upon the people, the, having the mark of the beast

[5] and those worshiping its image

[1] and the second poured out his bowl into the sea:

[2-3] and it became blood as of a corpse

[4-5] and every soul of life died that (was) in the sea

[1-2] and the third poured out his bowl into the ivers and the springs of water:

[3-4] and it became blood

[5] and I heard

[9] the angel of the waters saying

[10] just are You –

[2-4] yes, Lord, the God, the Almighty!

[5-6] true and just are Your judgments

[8] and the fourth poured out his bowl upon the sun

2nd Bowl: Stature = 222

3rd Bowl: Stature = 333

4th Bowl: Stature = 444

First Bowl

Singlefold feature of the bowl: The “first” angel poured out his bowl:
(Great voice) x (Angel) x (“first” → 1) = (10) x (10) x (1) = 100

Singlefold feature of the bowl being poured out:
(God’s wrath) x (1st Bowl → 1) = (10) x (1) = 10

Singlefold feature of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (1st → 1) = 1

Literary Stature of First Bowl = 100 + 10 + 1 = 111

Second Bowl

Twofold features of the bowl: The “second” angel poured out his bowl:
(Great voice) x (Angel) x (“second” → 2) = (10) x (10) x (2) = 200

Twofold features of the bowl being poured out:
(God’s wrath) x (2nd Bowl → 2) = (10) x (2) = 20

Twofold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (2nd → 2) = 2

Literary Stature of Second Bowl = 200 + 20 + 2 = 222

Third Bowl

Threefold features of the bowl: The “third” angel poured out his bowl:
(Great voice) x (Angel) x (“third” → 3) = (10) x (10) x (3) = 300

Threefold features of the bowl being poured out:
(God’s wrath) x (3rd Bowl → 3) = (10) x (3) = 30

Threefold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (3rd → 3) = 3

Literary Stature of Third Bowl = 300 + 30 + 3 = 333

Fourth Bowl

Fourfold features of the bowl: The “fourth” angel poured out his bowl:
(Great voice) x (Angel) x (“fourth” → 4) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

Fourfold features of the bowl being poured out:
(God’s wrath) x (4th Bowl → 4) = (10) x (4) = 40

Fourfold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (4th → 4) = 4
This fourfold impact is reflected in the fourfold response of earth-dwellers:
(1) were scorched; (2) blasphemed; (3-4) did not repent, to give Him glory.

Literary Stature of Fourth Bowl = 400 + 40 + 4 = 444

5th Bowl: Stature = 555

[1] and the fifth poured out his bowl upon the throne of the beast
 [2-3] and (there) became, its kingdom, having been darkened
 [4] and they gnawed their tongues from the evil
 [5-6] and blasphemed the God of the heaven from their pains and from their sores
 [7] and they did not repent from their works
 [8-10] and the sixth poured out his bowl upon the river, the great, the Euphrates

[1] and (there) was dried up, its water
 [2-3] in order that (there) might be prepared, the way of the kings, the, from rise of sun [east]
 [7] and I saw:
 [4-6] from the mouth of the dragon and from the mouth of the beast and from the mouth of the false-prophet:

[7-9] spirits, three,
 [10] unclean, like frogs

[1-2] for they are spirits of demons, working signs
 [3-4] who go out to the kings of the world, whole
 [5-6] to gather them to the war of the day, the great, of God
 [7] the Almighty

[8] behold, I come like a thief!
 [1-3] blessed (is) (he) who is staying awake and keeping his clothing!
 [4] in order that, not naked should he walk around
 [5] and they see his indecency!

[8] and he assembled them to the place
 [9] being called, in Hebrew, "Armageddon"

[10] and the seventh poured out his bowl into the air

[9-10] and there came a voice, great, out of the sanctuary, from the throne, saying
 [1] it has happened!

Rev. 16:17

[2-4] and (there) happened: lightnings and voices and thunders
 [5-6] and an earthquake happened, great
 [7-8] such as had not happened, from which, man happened upon the earth
 [9-10] so great (an) earthquake (was) this great
 [1-2] and (there) became, the city, the great:
 [3-5] into three parts
 [6] and the cities of the nations fell
 [7-8]* and Babylon, the Great, was remembered before God, to give her the cup of the wine of the anger of His wrath
 [9] and every island fled
 [10] and mountains were not found

Fifth Bowl

Fivefold features of the bowl: The "fifth" angel poured out his bowl:
 (Great voice) x (Angel) x ("fifth" → 5) = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

Fivefold features of the bowl being poured out:
 (God's wrath) x (5th Bowl → 5) = (10) x (5) = 50

Fivefold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (5th → 5) = 5
 This fivefold impact is reflected in the fivefold transition of the beast's kingdom: (1) darkness; (2) evil that causes people to gnaw their tongues; (3-4) pains and sores that give rise to blasphemy; and (5) hardness of heart resulting in a refusal to repent of sinful deeds.

Literary Stature of Fifth Bowl = 500 + 50 + 5 = 555

"spirits, three" | These spirits are presented in (unit | quantity) format, perhaps indicating hidden meaning. The number three appears to relate to the threefold source in the previous three lines (dragon, beast, and false-prophet). These spirits are immediately described as being "unclean, like frogs." Their domain is the "world, whole." Perhaps the description points back to the nature of the plague of frogs upon Egypt. There, the frogs were inescapable: coming into "your house... your bedroom... your bed..." and "upon you." When the magicians imitated this plague, it was the last they were able to imitate (Ex. 8:7). So here, the threefold frogs will be the last ability of demonic activity and will be inescapable for the worldly kings.

Sixth Bowl

Sixfold features of the bowl: The "sixth" angel poured out his bowl:
 (Great voice) x (Angel) x ("sixth" → 6) = (10) x (10) x (6) = 600

Sixfold features of the bowl being poured out:
 (God's wrath) x (6th Bowl → 6) = (10) x (6) = 60

Sixfold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (6th → 6) = 6
 This sixfold impact may be reflected in context: (1-3) as drying up "the river, the great, the Euphrates"; and (4-6) as the rising of "spirits, three" from the mouth of the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet. Taken together, these are a 3 + 3 = sixfold statement of preparation as a result of the bowl being poured out.

Literary Stature of Sixth Bowl = 600 + 60 + 6 = 666

 [4-5] and stone, precious
 [6] and pearls
 [7-8] having a cup, golden, in her hand
 [9-10] being full of abominations and the uncleannesses of her sexual immorality
 [1-2] and upon her forehead, a name having been written, a mystery:
 [3-4] Babylon, the Great
 [5-6] the mother of prostitutes and of the abominations of earth

Seventh Bowl

Sevenfold features of the bowl: The “seventh” angel poured out his bowl:
 (Great voice) x (Angel) x (“seventh” → 7) = (10) x (10) x (7) = 700

Sevenfold features of the bowl being poured out:
 (God’s wrath) x (7th Bowl → 7) = (10) x (7) = 70

Sevenfold features of plague experienced in the earthly realm: (7th → 7) = 7
 This sevenfold impact may be reflected in context, in doubled proportion.
 The calamity involves sevenfold effects to the created realm: (1) lightnings;
 (2) voices; (3) thunders; (4) great earthquake; (5) islands flee; (6) mountains not found; (7) exceedingly great hail. The calamity also brings sevenfold impact upon the rebellious earth-dwellers: (1-3) the great city divided into three parts; (4) cities of the nations fall; (5) Babylon the Great drinks the cup of God’s wrathful anger; (6) people are crushed by gigantic hailstones; (7) people blaspheme against God.

Literary Stature of Seventh Bowl = 700 + 70 + 7 = 777

“having heads, seven and horns, ten” | This is the original description of the dragon from chapter 13. It is not resequenced to “horns, ten and heads, seven” for the Beast of the Sea as it was in chapter 13. Here, it remains in (unit | quantity) format, perhaps for hidden meaning. That meaning will be identified as “mystery” and will be explained in (quantity | unit) format of the same (“having the seven heads and ten horns”), on the page below.

“was, having been arrayed” | Although this combination of being verb with participle could be counted as a single literary element, it appears John broke it into two, judging by the completeness of literary sets.

[10] and I saw

[7-8] the woman, being drunk from the blood of the saints and from the blood of the witnesses of Jesus

[1-2] and I wondered, seeing her, (with) wonder, great

[3] and (there) said to me, the angel

[3] because of what do you wonder?

[4] I will tell you

[9] the mystery of the woman

[10] and of the beast, of the, carrying her

[1-7]* of the, having the seven heads

[8] and ten horns

[–] the beast –

[4] you saw –

[9-10] was and is not

[1-2] and is about, to rise from the abyss

[3] and to destruction, go

[4] and (there) will wonder

[5] those dwelling upon the earth

[6] of whom, (there) has not been written, the name, upon the book of life from foundation of world

[7] seeing the beast:

[8-10] that it was and is not and will be present

[5] here (is) the mind

[6] the having wisdom:

[1-7]* the seven heads –

[8]* seven mountains are

[9] where the woman sits upon them

[10]* and kings, seven, are:

[1-5] the five fell

[6] the one is

[7] the, another, has not yet come

[8] and when he should come

[9-10] a little, him, it is necessary, to remain

[1-2] and the beast – the, it was and is not –

[3] also it, an eighth, is

[4-10] and of the seven, it is

10

“having the seven heads and ten horns” | The angel inverts this number to (quantity | unit) format as he prepares to explain the mystery.

“the seven heads” | This equative statement is counted similarly to Joseph’s dreams in Genesis 41. The seven is counted in full value only once.

“seven mountains” | The mountains are formatted as (quantity | unit). In Dan. 2, “mountain” is used to portray the final kingdom, God’s kingdom, that will fill the entire earth. Here, “seven mountains” appears to indicate the sevenfold earthly kingdom upon which Lady Babylon was presently sitting, which in John’s time was Rome, historically a seven-hill city.

“kings seven” | The kings are formatted in (unit | quantity), possibly for hidden meaning. As with the number of the beast, so here also John indicates the need for wisdom. The needful wisdom may relate to the use of literary devices to reveal meaning.

The overall language of the near context appears to parallel Dan. 7. In the Book of Daniel, five kings are named with the title “King”: Jehoiakim, Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, and Cyrus. Two forthcoming “king” roles form the literary horizon: king of south and king of north (Dan. 10-12). Although the king of north / despicable person role may have been partly fulfilled in the historical situation of Ancient Greece and Antiochus Epiphanes IV, it may prefigure the rise of the Anti-Christ at the end of the age. John may echo this anticipation: that the age of Daniel’s named kings has passed, that the “king of south” role remains in power, and that the “king of north” role will rise to power at the end of the age. If so, the beast here in Rev. 17, who is an eighth but belongs to the seven, may echo the spiritual “prince of Greece” from Dan. 10. That evil spiritual being fought Michael and the divine Man for a period of time while remaining in the literary/historical shadows, then arose to empower the “king of north” role and the rise of Antiochus.

If this observation is accurate, it may be noteworthy that “land” and “sea” are both featured in the visions of Daniel 10 – 12. The literary title for the final sections of Daniel (chapters 8, 9, and 10-12) was “Stand, Lord, until all land is south.” In chapters 10 – 12, the word “land” was used ten times, all in connection with the “king of north.” (continued...)

[1] and to destruction, it goes
 [2]* and the ten horns
 [7] that you saw –
 [3]* ten kings, they are
 [4] who, a kingdom, have not yet received
 [5-6] but authority as kings, one hour, they will receive with the beast
 [7] these, one mind, have
 [8-9] and their power and authority, to the beast, they give [10] these with the Lamb will wage war

[5] and the Lamb will conquer them!

[1-2] because, Lord of lords, He is,
 [3-4] and King of kings!
 [5-7] and those with Him (are) called and chosen and faithful
 [8] and he said to me:

(-] the waters
 [8] that you saw
 [1] where the prostitute sits:
 [2-3]* peoples and crowds, they are
 [4-5] and nations and languages
 [6] and the ten horns
 [9] that you saw
 [7] and the beast:
 [8] these will hate the prostitute
 [9] and – having been made desolate –
 [10] they will make her

[1] and naked
 [2] and her flesh they will eat
 [3] and her, they will burn in fire

[9] for God has given into their hearts
 [4] to do His mind
 [5] and to work (with) one mind
 [6] and to give their kingdom to the beast
 [10] until, (there) are completed, the words of God

(-] and the woman –
 [10] that you saw –
 [7-8] is the city, the great
 [9] the, having a kingdom over the kings of the earth

(continued) ...This king of north had his own land, which is referenced four times. He also sought control of other lands:

1. Standing “in land, the beauty” (likely Israel)
2. Capturing many coastlands (not counted among tenfold instances of “land” due to it being a different noun)
3. Dividing land, generally, for a price
4. Entering and overflowing lands, generally
5. Entering “into land of the beauty” (again, likely Israel)
6. Sending his hand into lands, generally
7. Land of Egypt “will not be to an escape”

At his final moment, this king of north “will pitch tents of his palace between the seas toward mountain of beauty of holy.” In this final moment, the king is portrayed as reaching from the “seas” toward the holy mountain with no mention of the earth’s lands. In connection with his “prince of Greece” provenance, the reach from the seas appears fitting. His end occurs in the very next line. Revelation’s Beast of the Sea may reprise this role.

The king of south, which corresponds with the land of Egypt, is a literary foil for the king of north. There are multiple instances of intrigue, diplomacy, and infighting between these kings. The king of south provides literary context for the king of north’s land acquisitions and final assault against God and His people. Revelation’s Beast of the Earth may reprise this role.

“and the ten horns that you saw, ten kings, they are” | These ten horns and ten kings closely match the language of Dan. 7:24 concerning the little horn arising from the fourth beast (Rome). Here in Revelation, “that you saw” separates the two sides of the equative statement. This nuance may indicate an echo of Dan. 7:24, where the ten horns and ten kings were each counted for ten elements. So also here, the literary count is held at ten for both the horns and the kings.

“peoples and crowds they are” | This is a unique variation of the typical fourfold description of humanity. Here, the being verb is placed after the first two groups. This division of the fourfold description may indicate dividedness among the prostitute’s followers.

(...Rev. 17:18)

(Rev. 18:1...)

[1] after this, I saw

[1] another angel

[2] coming down from the heaven

[3-4] having authority, great

[10] and the earth was illuminated from his glory

[5-6] and he called with a mighty voice, saying

[1-2] (there) has fallen, (there) has fallen

[3-4] Babylon, the Great

[5-6]* and she has become a dwelling-place of demons

[7-8]* and a prison of every spirit, unclean

[9-10] and a prison of every bird, unclean

[1-2] (and a prison of every beast, unclean) and (of) having been hated

[3] because from the wine of the passion of her sexual immorality, (there) have drunk, all the nations

[4] and the kings of the earth, with her, committed sexual immorality

[5] and the merchants of the earth, from the power of her sensuality, became rich

[2] and I heard

[7] another voice from the heaven, saying

[1] come out, My people, from her

[2] in order that, you may not take part in her sins

[3] and of her plagues, in order that you may not receive

[1] because, (there) are adhered to her, the sins, unto the heaven

[8] and (there) has remembered, God, her unrighteousnesses

[4] give to her

[2] as also she gave

[5-6] and repay her the double, according to her works

[3] in the cup that she mixed

[4-5] as she glorified herself and lived sensually

[9-10] so great, give to her torment and grief

[6] because in her heart she says

[7-8] I sit, queen,

[9] and a widow I am not

[10] and grief I should not see

[1] because of this, in one day will come her plagues:

[2-4] death and grief and famine

[5] and in fire she will be consumed

[9-10] because mighty (is) the Lord, the God, the judging her

“she has become a dwelling-place... a prison...” | “Dwelling place” is followed by a threefold presentation of the fallen city Babylon as being a “prison.” Here, the city lacks the grandeur of a literary mirroring device with measures of meaning, as the earthly holy city (Rev. 11:2) and the heavenly holy city (Rev. 21:17) have. Rather, the local mirror is simply this: “prison,” with “prison” on each side. This threefold may be modeled like the threefold measure of 42 elements (Rev. 11:2) and of 144 elements (Rev. 21:17). Like those measured cities, this unmeasured city (the dashed gray line) is the midpoint between the 238-fold literary binder for major sections 4 → 5 and the 92-fold literary binder for major sections 6 → 7.

[1-2] and (there) will weep and lament over her, the kings of the earth
 [3-4] the, with her, committing sexual immorality and living sensually
 [5] when they should see the smoke of her conflagration

[1-2] from far off, having stood, because of the fear of her torment, saying
 [3-4] woe, woe!
 [5-6] the city, the great
 [7-9] Babylon, the city, the mighty
 [10] because in one hour came your judgment!

[1-2] and the merchants of the earth weep and lament over her
 [3] because their cargo, no one purchases any longer:
 [4-10] cargo of gold and silver and stones, precious, and pearls and linen and purple

[1-2] and silk and scarlet
 [3-4] and all wood, citron
 [5-6] and every object, ivory
 [7-8] and every object from wood, most precious
 [9-10] and bronze and iron

[1-10] and marble and cinnamon and amomum and incense and myrrh and frankincense and wine and olive-oil and fine-flour and grain

[1-4] and cattle and sheep and horses and wagons
 [5-6] and bodies, even souls of humans
 [7-8] and your fruit, the desire of the soul, has departed from you
 [9-10] and everything, the luxurious and the splendid, is ruined from you

[1-2] and no longer, not lest, will they be found [3-4] the merchants of these – the, being wealthy from her – from far off, will stand, because of the fear of her torment
 [5-6] weeping and lamenting
 [7] saying
 [8-9] woe, woe!
 [10] the city,

[1] the great
 [2-4] the, having been clothed (with) linen and purple and scarlet
 [5-8] and having been adorned (with) gold and stones, precious, and pearls
 [9-10] because in one hour (there) was made desolate the, so great, wealth!

[1-2] and every shipmaster and every, the, upon position of sailing
 [3-4] and sailors and, as many as, the sea, work, from far off, stood

[5-7] and they cried out, seeing the smoke of her conflagration, saying

[8-9] who (is) like the city, the great?

[10] and they threw dust upon their heads

[1-4] and they called out, weeping and lamenting, saying

[5-6] woe, woe

[7-8] the city, the great

[9-10] in whom, (there) became wealthy all the, having the ships in the sea, from her wealth

[1] because in one hour she was made desolate

[1] rejoice over her, heaven

[1-3] and the saints and the apostles and the prophets

[2] because, (there) has judged, God:

[4] your judgment from her

[3-4] and (there) lifted, one angel, mighty, a stone like a millstone,

[5] great

[6-7] and he threw it into the sea, saying

[2-3] in this way, with violence, (there) will be thrown down, Babylon, the great city, and not, lest be found again

[4-7] and voice of harpists and of musicians and flutists and trumpeters – not, lest be heard in you again

[8] and every craftsman of every craft, not, lest be found in you again

[9] and voice of millstone, not, lest be heard in you again

[10] and light of lamp, not, lest shine in you again

[1-2] and voice of groom and bride, not, lest be heard in you again

[3] because your merchants were the great persons of earth

[4] because in your sorcery, (there) were deceived, all the nations

[5-6] and in her, blood of prophets and of saints was found

[5] and of all those having been slain upon the earth (...Rev. 18:24)

[3] after this I heard (Rev. 19:1...)

[8-9] like a voice, great, of a crowd,

[10] many, in the heaven, saying

[1] Hallelujah!

[2-4] the salvation and the glory and the power (are) of our God!

[5-6] because true and just (are) His judgments

[7] because He judged

[7-8] the prostitute, the great, who corrupted the earth with her sexual immorality

[8] and He avenged the blood of His servants from her hand

[9] and a second spoke

“the twenty-” | For the 1260-fold cross reference from Rev. 11:2, the special number 20 is counted below the cross-reference line (shown with the dashed green lines). For the 39-fold literary mirroring device in the local context, the 20 is counted above the mirroring line (shown with the dashed gray line). This approach reflects the interlocking nature of cross-reference with local context, as a weaving together of the local and global designs of the book.

In this large section, only three Greek words are used exactly ten times: “angel(s),” “with,” and “bowl(s).” Taken together, these may form the literary title Angels with Bowls. This appears fitting for the content of this section.

[1] and I saw

(Rev. 19:11...)

[1]* heaven having been opened

[1-2] and behold, a horse, white

[3-4] and He, sitting upon it, (was) Faithful and True

[5-6] and in righteousness He judges and wages war

[7-8] now His eyes (were) a flame of fire

[9-10] and upon His head (were) diadems, many

[1] having a name

[2] having been written

[3] that no one has known except He

[4] and having been clothed (with) a robe

[5] having been dipped in blood

[6-7] and (there) has been called, His name, "the Word of the God"

[2-3] and the armies in the heaven followed Him upon horses, white

[4-6] having put on linen, white, clean

[8-9] and from His mouth goes out a sword, sharp

[10] in order that, with it, He should strike the nations

[1-2] and He will shepherd them with a staff, iron

[3-4] and He will tread the winepress of the wine of the anger of the wrath of God, the Almighty

[5-6] and He has upon His robe and upon His thigh, a name having been written:

[7-10] "King of kings and Lord of lords"

[2] and I saw

[7] one angel

[8] having stood in the sun

[9-10] and he called (with) a voice, great, saying to all the birds –

[1] who were flying in mid-heaven:

[2] come!

[3-4] gather to the supper, the great, of God

[5-6] in order that you should eat flesh of kings and flesh of thousandfold-chiefs

[7] and flesh of mighty (people)

[8-9] and flesh of horses and of (those) who are sitting upon them

[10] and flesh of all –

[1-4] both of free (people) and of slaves and of small (people) and of great (people)

[3] and I saw

[1-3] the beast and the kings of earth and their armies

[4-5] having been gathered, to make the war

One Angel

One feature of the angel: He is described as "one angel" and is presented with a singular description, "having stood in the sun." Thus: (God of the great supper) x ("one" angel) = (10) x (10) = 100

The singular focus of this angel is to commission a tenfold apocalyptic carnage, a "supper." This carnage is depicted through tenfold elements ("flesh of kings... and of great..."). Thus: (tenfold carnage) = 10

The earthly impact is for the fowl to eat: "that you should eat." Thus: 1
This singular impact is emphasized by the single outlier element #5, on the following page: "...all the birds were fed..."

Literary Stature of "One Angel" = 100 + 10 + 1 = 111

"The Two" | This phrase (next page), occurring at this late stage of development in the Apocalypse, may echo the phrase "and two of them, the kings" from Dan. 11:27. There in Daniel, the kings of north and south made a third attempt at unification, "upon table, one." (See notes there.) Their heart (singular) was "to evil," and they spoke falsehood together. These features are paralleled in the beast and false prophet here in Revelation. However, Daniel's kings of north and south did not prosper in their union because the end was still awaiting its appointed time. Further along the prophetic narrative, this "king of north" role, having been reprised as the despicable person (by influence of the spiritual being "prince of Greece"), finally reached the end of his path. On the literary level, a similar phenomenon may occur here: a brief literary break separates the demise of beast and false prophet from the demise of Satan. If this observation is accurate, it may further confirm a literary connection between the two kings, north and south, and the two beasts of Revelation, of sea and of land, respectively. See notes in the previous section for "kings, seven."

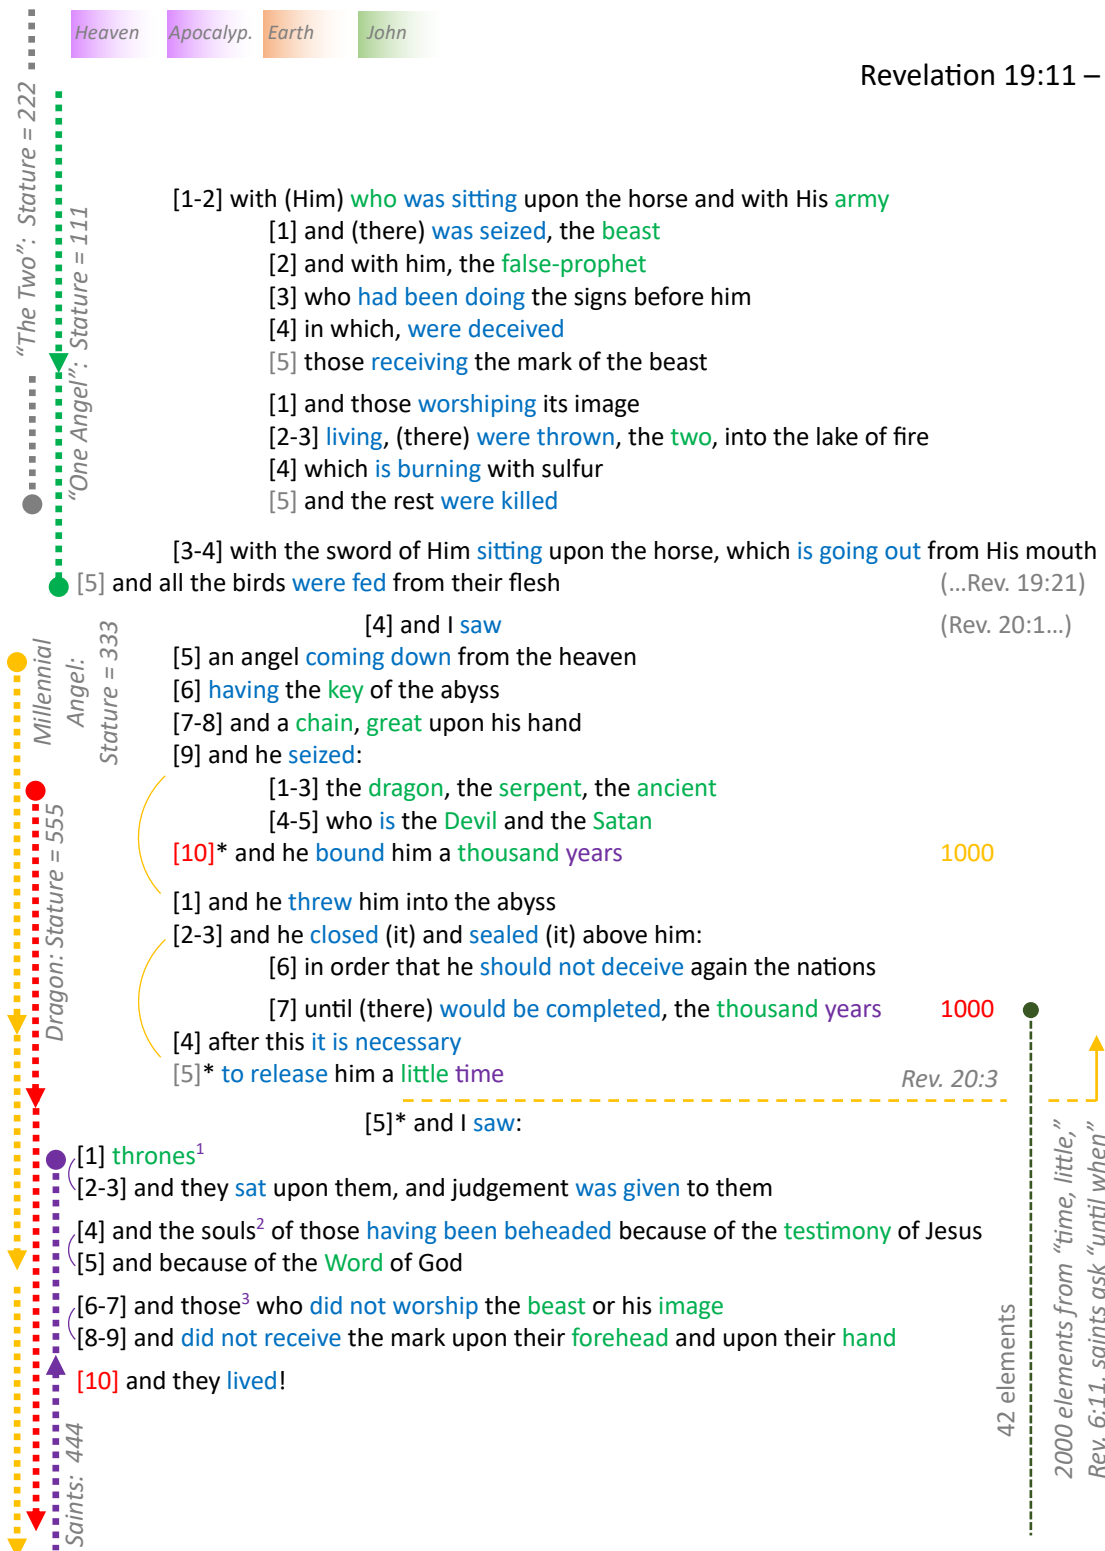

Beast and false prophet are described as "the two." Per the discussion above, their alignment is not entirely harmonious. In context, these two are amplified by rebellious humanity. Thus: (beast + false prophet) x (rebellious humanity) = (10 + 10) x (10) = (20) x (10) = 200

These are remembered for the false prophet's twofold endeavor: performing signs and deceiving: (false prophet) x (twofold endeavor) = (10) x (2) = 20

"Living, (there) were thrown, the two..." The twofold eternal consequence may also be reflected in "fire" and "sulfur." Twofold impact = 2

Literary Stature of "The Two" = 200 + 20 + 2 = 222

"The Two" (Beast and False Prophet): Stature = 222
"One Angel": Stature = 111

"a thousand years" | The number "thousand" appears to be a composite number reflecting three tenfold identities working in alignment, like other instances in Daniel and Revelation. The number is also placed six times here, for a six-thousandfold measure of the age. See remarks at the very end of this study for the parallel with Daniel's measure of the age. Here, the thousandfolds occur within the space of literary statures 333, 555, and 444 of this major section, which are presented in an overlapping pattern:

Two thousandfolds pertain to the actions of the Millennial Angel ("angel coming down from heaven"), having literary stature 333:

- "he seized the dragon... and bound him a thousand years"
- "and when, should be completed, the thousand years, (there) will be released, the Satan, from his prison"

The stature of these thousandfold measures may be composed from context as: (God Almighty) x (Word of God) x (Angel) = (10) x (10) x (10) = 1000-fold

Two thousandfolds pertain to the demise of the Dragon and his people, having literary stature 555:

- "he should not deceive again the nations until (there) would be complete, the thousand years"
- "the rest of the dead did not live until (there) would be complete, the thousand years"

The stature of these thousandfold measures may be composed from context in the same manner as for the Millennial Angel, who has been given control.

Two thousandfolds pertain to Saints of the first resurrection, having literary stature 444:

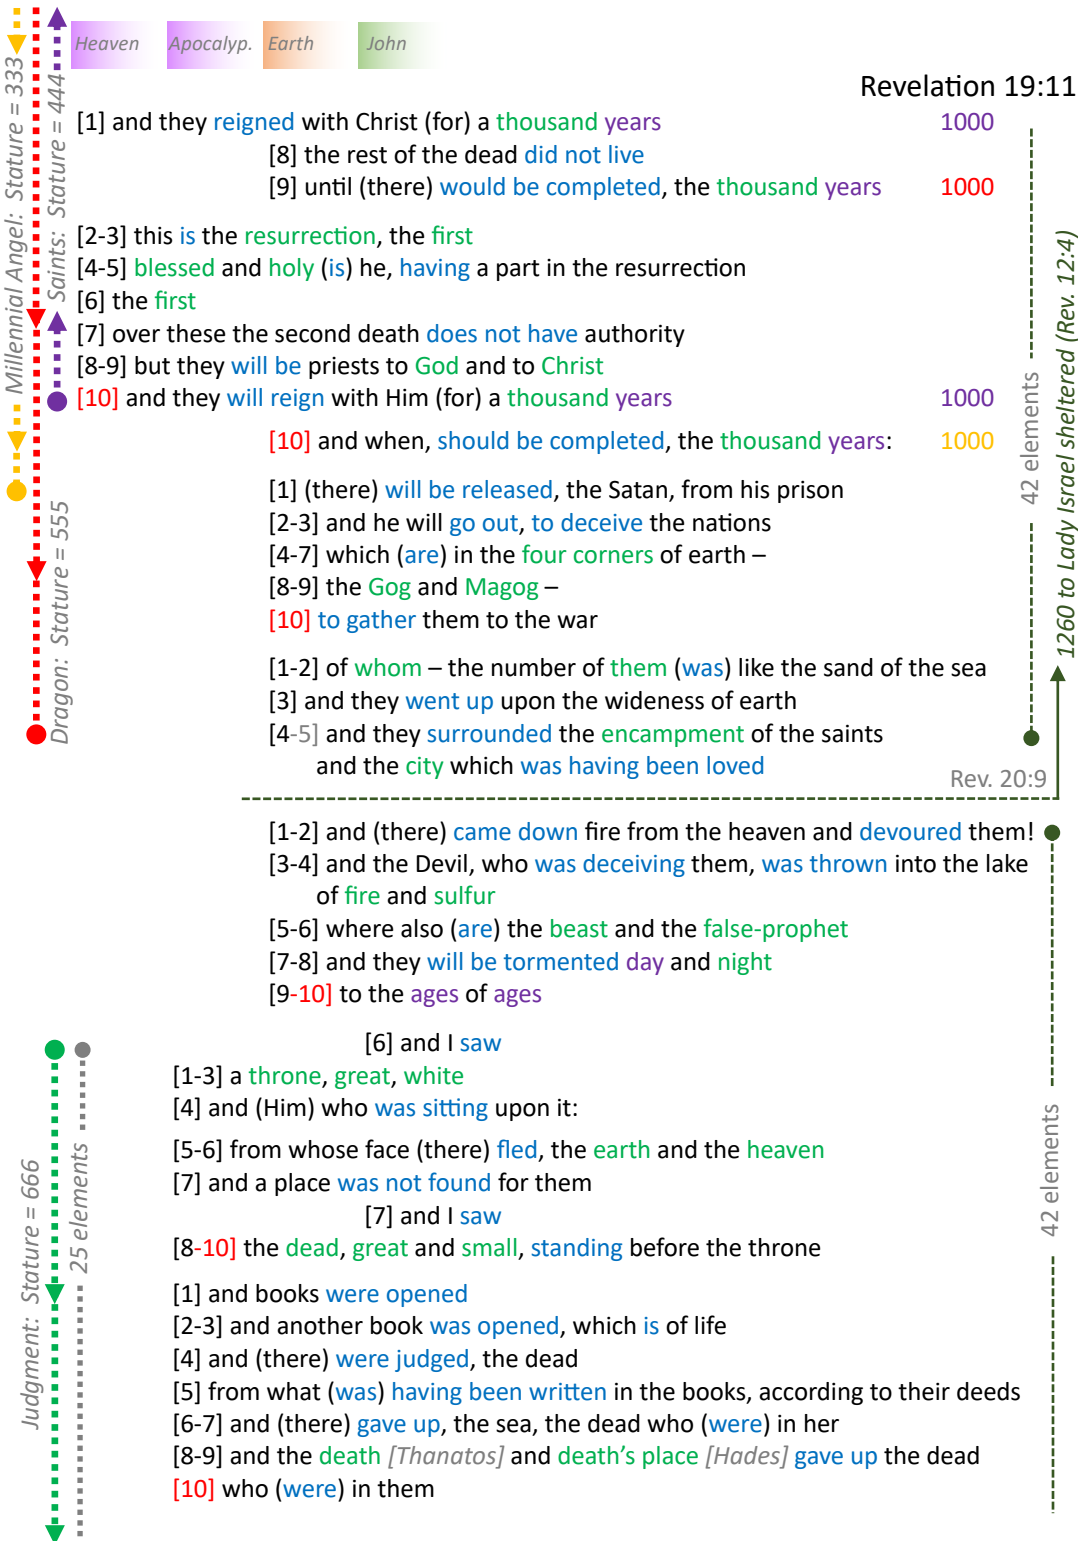

- "they lived, and they reigned with Christ (for) a thousand years"
- "they will reign with Him (for) a thousand years"

The stature of these thousandfold measures may be composed from context as: (God) x (Jesus) x (Saints) = (10) x (10) x (10) = 1000-fold

John's "and I saw" remarks, serve to distinguish the thousandfolds into groups: first of two, then of four. See further comments, below.

"a little time" | This "little time" is the literary inversion of the "time, little" for which the souls of martyred saints were urged to wait patiently. What was contemplated from the heavenly perspective in (unit | quantity) format there in Rev. 6:11 is now described in the earthly sphere using the (quantity | unit) format. These instances of "time, little" and "little time" form an exact, 2000-element measure (inclusive). This measure appears to be the response to the question "until when" in 6:10.

Revelation 19:11 – 21:4

Threefold Millennial Angel

The millennial angel is authorized from heaven and is identified as having threefold things in hand: “having the key of the abyss and a chain, great upon his hand.” Thus from context:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{Millennial Angel}) \times (\text{threefold features}) = (10) \times (10) \times (3) = 300$$

The three endeavors of this angel are presented in relation to the identity of Satan: to seize him, to bind him, and to throw him into the abyss. Thus:

$$(\text{Millennial Angel}) \times (\text{threefold endeavor}) = (10) \times (3) = 30$$

The earthly impacts from these three endeavors are also threefold, presented in relation to the abyss. The angel closes and seals the abyss over Satan. Later, he will release this seal. Thus: 3

$$\text{Literary Stature of the Millennial Angel} = 300 + 30 + 3 = 333$$

Fivefold Dragon and his People

Notice John’s literary design: the fivefold Dragon is presented prior to introducing the fourfold saints of the first resurrection. This out-of-sequence literary design may correspond with the inversion of the 444-fold stature of the saints of the first resurrection. See discussion, end of this section.

The dragon is presented in fivefold identity in this passage, but subject to close control by the Millennial Angel: “the dragon, the serpent, the ancient, who is the Devil and the Satan.” The dragon is aligned with the nations, which are also developed as a tenfold literary identity here in context (“Earth” subject column, from “four corners” to “surrounded”):

$$(\text{Dragon}) \times (\text{fivefold identity}) \times (\text{Nations}) = (10) \times (5) \times (10) = 500$$

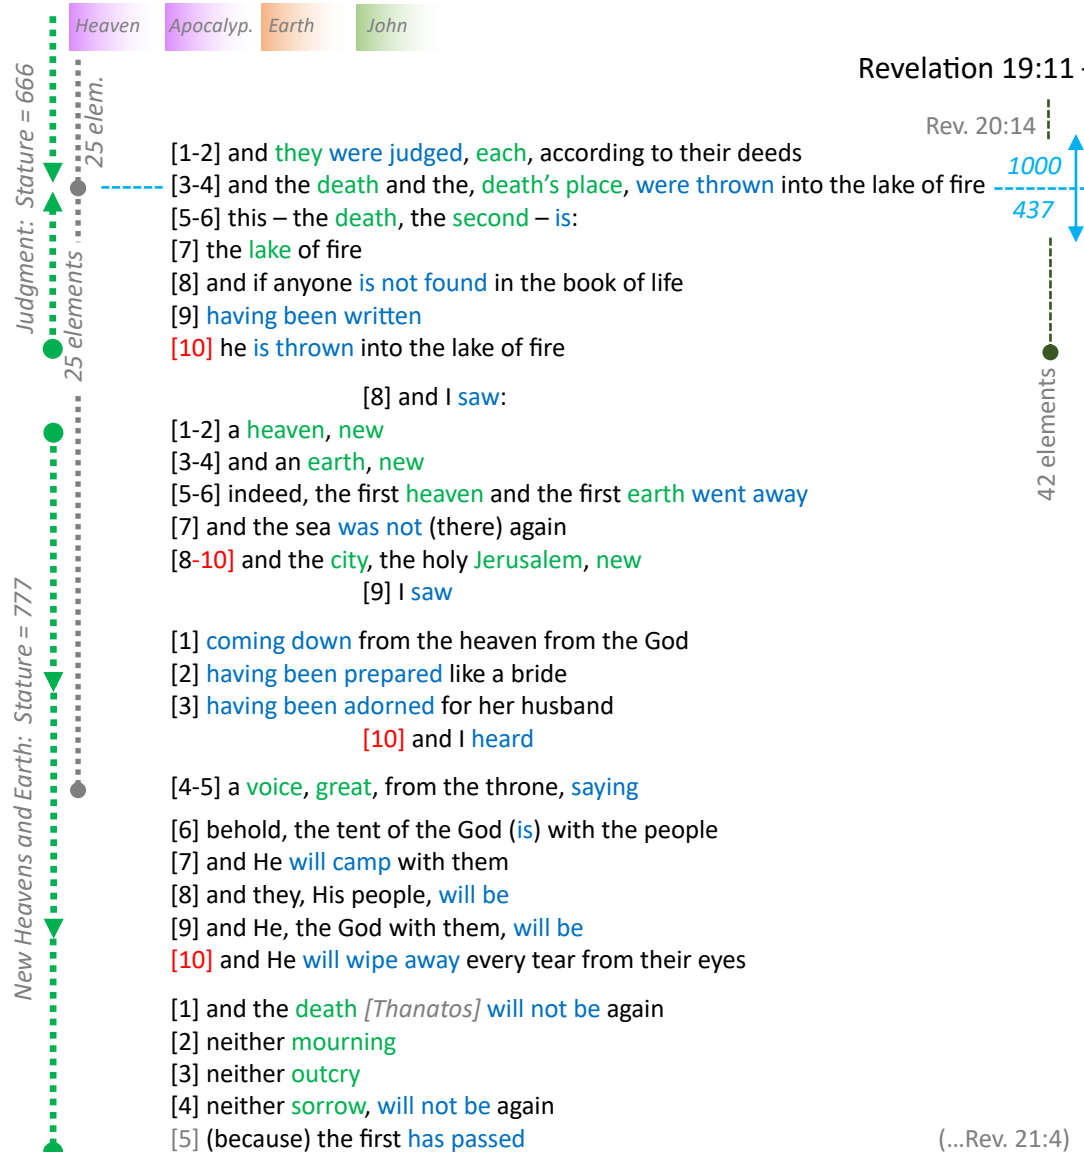

The fivefold endeavor of the dragon is presented in two components, before and after the literary thousandfolds. Beforehand, with singular significance: “in order that he should not deceive again the nations until (there) would be completed, the thousand years.” Afterwards, with fourfold significance: “and when, should be completed, the thousand years... he will go out, to deceive the nations which (are) in the four corners of earth...” Thus:

$$(\text{Satan}) \times (\text{singlefold deception} + \text{fourfold deception}) = (10) \times (5) = 50$$

The earthly import from the dragon’s fivefold endeavor is a literary fivefold: a twofold army (“Gog and Magog”) having singular description (“number... like the sand of the sea”) surrounding a twofold object (“the encampment of the saints and the city”). Thus: $2 + 1 + 2 = 5$

$$\text{Literary Stature of the Dragon and his People} = 500 + 50 + 5 = 555$$

Revelation 19:11 – 21:4

Literary Subtotal: Revelation 19:11 – 21:4

- (45x) Heaven
- (100x) Apocalypse
- (50x) Earth
- (10x) John
- (205x) Total

In this smallest section, only one Greek word is used exactly ten times: “of / out of / from.”

We will look for the remaining tenfold words to complete this phrase.

Fourfold Saints of the First Resurrection

The stature of these fourfold saints is presented in inverted order. Working backwards from the end of the description:

The collective identity of these saints is presented in two pairings. First: “they will be priests to God and to Christ.” Second: “blessed and holy (is) he, having a part in the resurrection, the first.” Thus:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{Christ}) \times (\text{fourfold identity of saints}) = (10) \times (10) \times (4) = 400$$

The fourfold endeavor of these saints is presented with parallel statements on either side of their identity. Working backwards, first: “they will be priests to God and to Christ, and they will reign with Him (for) a thousand years.” Last: “and they lived, and they reigned with Christ (for) a thousand years.”

$$(\text{Saints}) \times (\text{fourfold endeavor}) = (10) \times (4) = 40$$

The fourfold earthly import of these saints is presented in inverted order, reaching back to the beginning of John’s presentation of this literary stature. The fourfold value is reflected in action verbs, with emphasis on giving and receiving. These saints “did not receive the mark.” They “did not worship the beast or his image.” They were “having been beheaded because of the testimony of Jesus.” Then they “sat upon” the thrones to exercise the judgment given them against Satan and his people. Thus: 4

$$\text{Literary Stature of these Saints} = 400 + 40 + 4 = 444$$

Sixfold Stature of the Judgment

The setting of judgment opens with sixfold literary features. First, John sees “a throne, great, white” (three literary elements) occupied by the Person sitting upon it. Next, John sees “the dead, great and small” (three literary elements) who are standing before the throne. From parallel visions:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{humanity in general}) \times (\text{sixfold setting}) = (10) \times (10) \times (6) = 600$$

God’s endeavor of final judgment is presented in sixfold literary parallelism:

(1) Dead are judged... according to their deeds; (2) Sea gave up her dead; (3-4) Death and death’s place gave up their dead; (5-6) “and they were judged, each, according to their deeds.” Thus:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{sixfold judgment}) = (10) \times (6) = 60$$

The earthly impacts are presented in sixfold literary significance:

1-2. Death and death’s place are thrown into the lake of fire

3-4. The lake of fire is identified as “the death, the second”

5-6. Those not found written in the book of life are thrown into lake of fire

$$\text{Literary Stature of Second Resurrection} = 600 + 60 + 6 = 666$$

Literary devices for the thousandfolds

As noted, John mentions “thousand years” six times: in groups of 2 + 4 (by introduction and mirroring points); and in groups of 2, 2, and 2 (by literary subject). Each may have meaning.

Authors of Scripture consistently use six thousandfolds as a measure of the age, corresponding with six literary “days.” See discussions at Gen. 1, Gen. 5, and very end of the Genesis study; the discussion of time-related values at the very end of the Daniel study; the discussion of the total literary count at the end of Matthew’s gospel; the discussion of the total literary count and total time-related stature at the end of Luke’s gospel; the discussions of the time-related statures at the ends of 1 Peter and 2 Peter; and throughout John’s gospel.

In Daniel, the six thousandfolds are placed in inverted sequence about Daniel’s 430-element prefiguring of death and resurrection (chapter 6). These thousandfolds are placed – first four, then two – when sequenced backwards per the literary device. A similar literary device and sequencing is observed in 1 Peter. As with Daniel’s literary device, John may cue an inverted sequencing for the age by the introduction of literary statures in inverted sequence: 333, 555, 444. John cleverly places the numerals “four” and “two” on either side of this inversion, apparently by literary device corresponding to the layout of thousandfolds here. Thus, the sequence of the age is four thousandfolds placed before a central death/resurrection image followed by two thousandfolds placed afterward. Here, the central death/resurrection image is Jesus’ death and resurrection being imaged among His saints.

Matthew and Luke may echo the same measure of two thousandfolds for the present age, between Christ’s first coming and second. See comments on Mt. 26:1 (“after two days”) and on Luke 13:32 (“...I complete, today and tomorrow...”). See also 2 Peter (two thousandfolds). See also the comments for Psalm 90, where the value “thousand of years” has a dual significance. Here in Revelation, the two-thousandfold measure for the present age may be reflected in the layout of the same six thousandfolds in groups of two, by subject. Essentially, these are the same two thousandfolds being experienced by three different subjects: by the Millennial Angel, by the dragon, and by the Saints of the First Resurrection.

This measure – two thousandfolds – may also be reflected in John’s use of pairings, not by subject but by literary series, of “a thousand... the thousand” (3x, sequentially). In keeping with the literal value of “thousand years,” this literary device might be visualized this way, as a conceptual model, with “thousand years” being the amplitude of the church age:

This finding is corroborated by the 2000-fold literary measure discussed above, at Rev. 20:3.

Sevenfold Stature of the New Heavens and Earth

The vision of the new heavens and new earth opens with sevenfold literary significance:

- 1-2. “a heaven, new” (two literary elements)
- 3-4. “an earth, new” (two literary elements)
- 5-7. “the city, the holy Jerusalem, new” (three literary elements)

The new heavens, new earth, and holy city Jerusalem provide the context for God dwelling among His people: “like a bride... for her husband.” These two literary subjects will be developed more specifically in the next major section of Revelation. Thus:

$$(\text{Groom}) \times (\text{Bride}) \times (\text{sevenfold features}) = (10) \times (10) \times (7) = 700$$

The reality of the New Jerusalem is featured with sevenfold verbs:

1. “having been prepared like a bride”
2. “having been adorned for her husband”
3. “tent of God is with the people”
4. “He will camp with them”
5. “they, His people, will be”
6. “He, the God with them, will be”
7. “He will wipe away every tear from their eyes”

$$\text{Thus: } (\text{New Jerusalem}) \times (\text{sevenfold significance}) = (10) \times (7) = 70$$

The benefits to God’s people are presented as the elimination of “the first” things (as it were, earthy impacts):

- 1-2. “the first heaven and the first earth went away”
3. “the sea was not (there) again”
4. “and the death will not be again”
5. “neither mourning”
6. “neither outcry”
7. “neither sorrow, will not be again”

$$\text{Literary Stature of the New Heavens and Earth} = 700 + 70 + 7 = 777$$

For a similar example of literary pairings in John’s gospel, see comments, John 16:16-22. There, John may use “a little... and again a little” to indicate both near horizons (days) and distant horizons (thousandfolds of the age).

Singlefold: God Enthroned

One feature of God: He sits upon His throne. From broader context (e.g., Rev. 3:21, 22:1), the Father shares His throne with His Son. Thus:
 $(\text{God}) \times (\text{His Son}) \times (\text{sitting enthroned}) = (10) \times (10) \times (1) = 100$

One feature of work: “Behold, new, I make everything.”
 Thus: $(\text{God}) \times (1 \text{ feature of work}) = (10) \times (1) = 10$

One statement of impact: “It has happened.”

Literary Stature of God Enthroned = $100 + 10 + 1 = 111$

Twofold: God Enthroned – Part 2

Twofold feature of God: Parallel twofold divine identities are given, which from broader context are shared by Father and Son:

1. “I (am) the alpha and the O”
2. “the beginning and the end”

$(\text{God}) \times (\text{His Son}) \times (\text{twofold identities}) = (10) \times (10) \times (2) = 200$

Two relational things God does:

1. He gives to the thirsty, freely, from spring of water of life
2. He will be Father to the person who conquers

Thus: $(\text{God}) \times (2 \text{ relational things}) = (10) \times (2) = 20$

Impact upon God’s enemies: “the death, the second” (two literary elements)

Literary Stature of God Enthroned = $200 + 20 + 2 = 222$

“and I will be to him, God” | See similar construction and note, Gen. 28:21.

Threefold: One of the Seven Angels

Three features of this angel: (1) “one from the seven angels”; (2) “having the seven bowls,” (3) “being full of the seven plagues, the last.”

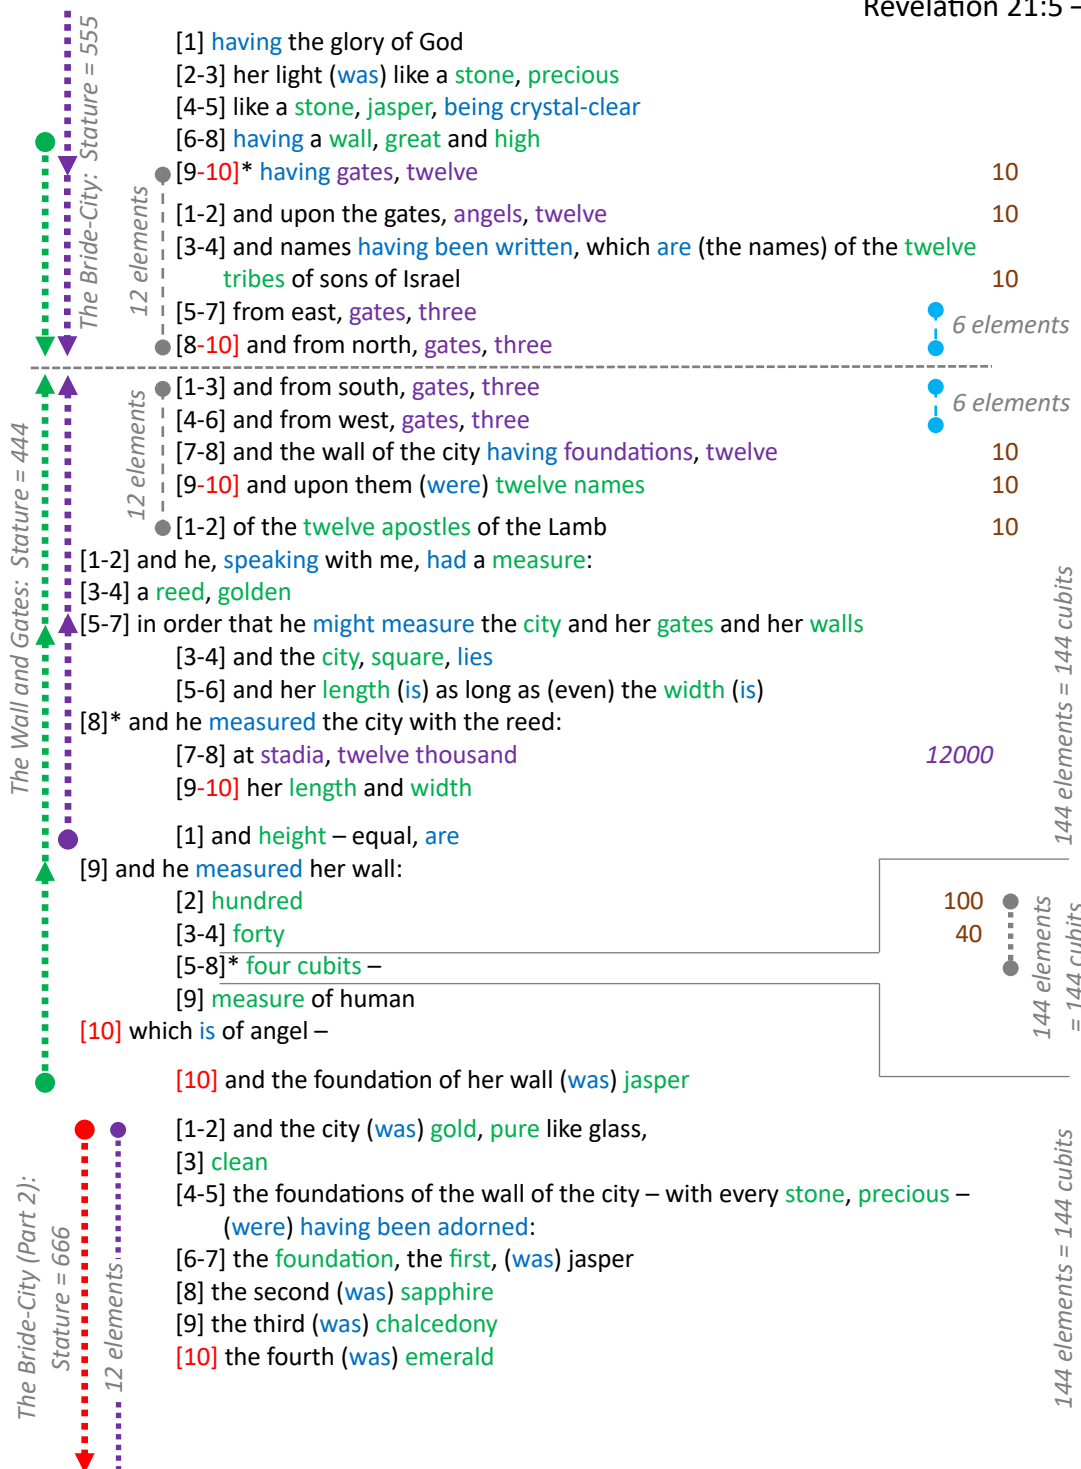

$(\text{God}) \times (\text{angel}) \times (\text{threefold features}) = (10) \times (10) \times (3) = 300$

Three things this angel does: (1) he promises to show things to John; (2) he carries John to a spiritual vantage; (3) he shows things to John:

$(\text{angel}) \times (\text{three things done}) = (10) \times (3) = 30$

Threefold significance for John: a threefold spiritual vantage, “a mountain, great and high” = three literary elements = 3

Literary Stature of One of the Seven Angels = $300 + 30 + 3 = 333$

Fivefold: The Bride-City

The Bride is presented out-of-sequence, as were the fivefold dragon with his people in chapter 20. The Bride is presented with a fivefold title: (1) the bride, (2) the wife of the Lamb, (3-4) the city, the holy, (5) Jerusalem. The city's identity consists in God, from whom it comes, and God's people.

(God) x (God's people) x (fivefold title) = (10) x (10) x (5) = 500

This fivefold title may correspond with the Bride being given to the Lamb. The giving of something can be reflected in fivefold literary half-sets in Scripture. See, for example, the concluding remarks for Song of Solomon, which shares this wedding theme and has a total literary count of 500.

The city has fivefold glory: (1) “having the glory of God”; (2-3) light “like a stone, precious; (4-5) crystal-clear “like a stone, jasper.” Thus:

(The Bride) x (fivefold glory) = (10) x (5) = 50

The fivefold aspect of this city is indicated by literary device: (1-4) a square aspect (“the city, square, lies”) substantiated in fourfold by the dual mentions “length... and width” and “length and width”; (5) the amplification of this square aspect into the third dimension: “and height – equal, are.”

Literary Stature of the Bride = $500 + 50 + 5 = 555$

Fourfold: The Wall and Gates

The wall of the city is given a fourfold description: (1-3) “a wall, great and high”; (4) “the foundation... jasper.” This mention of jasper forms an inclusio with the mention of jasper for the Bride’s glory. The wall is identified with the tribes of Israel (gates) and the apostles of the Lamb (foundations). Thus:

(The Lamb) x (Israel) x (fourfold description) = (10) x (10) x (4) = 400

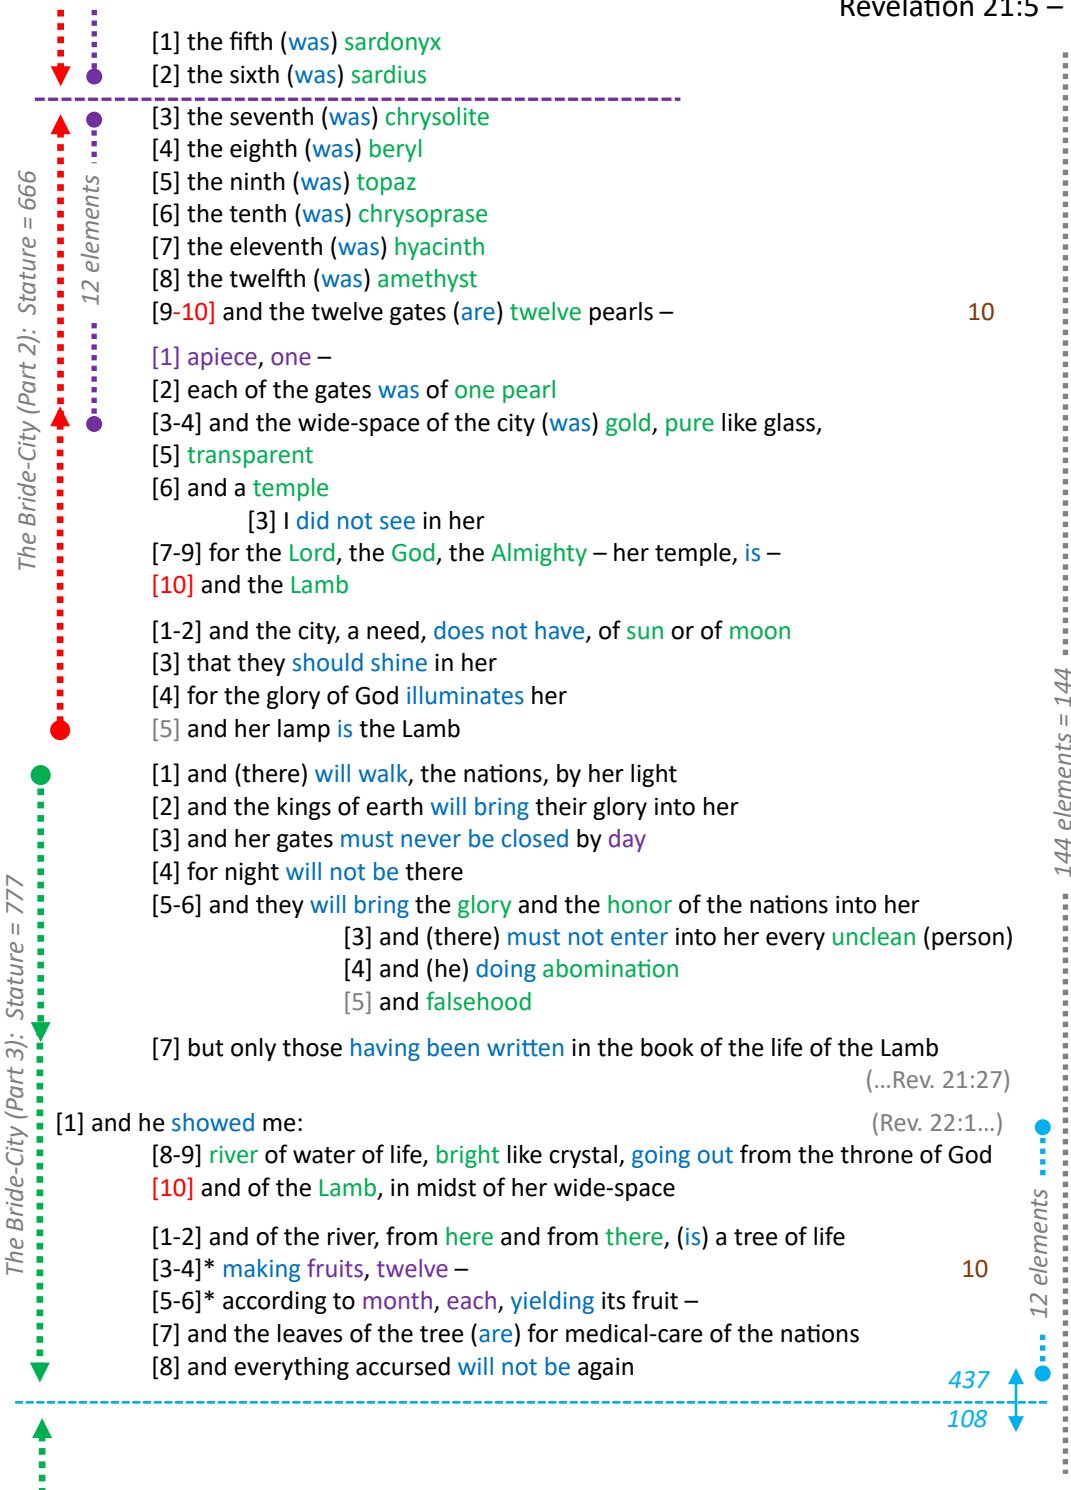

The wall's fourfold aspect, in connection with the named gates, is presented with the directions of the compass:

$$(\text{Israel}) \times (\text{east} + \text{north} + \text{south} + \text{west}) = (10) \times (4) = 40$$

“hundred forty four cubits” | The names of the apostles are written upon the wall’s foundations. The names of the tribes of Israel are written upon the wall’s gates. The stature of the wall is: (12 apostles) x (12 gates) = 144-fold. This squaring of twelve reemphasizes a fourfold aspect of the wall’s layout: 4

Literary Stature of the Wall = 400 + 40 + 4 = 444

On the measurement of city and wall, the significance of the mirrored 144-fold, and the literary conversion value of “cubit,” see comments below.

Sixfold: The Bride-City (Part 2)

“and the city (was) gold, pure like glass, clean” | Here, John introduces the city a second time. This reintroduction may be signaled by completion of the inclusio of “jasper... jasper,” from the glory of the city to the glory of the wall. John reintroduces the city and later remarks: “and the wide-space of the city (was) gold, pure like glass, transparent.” These dual descriptions – each three literary elements – form a sixfold quality:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{God's people}) \times (\text{sixfold quality}) = (10) \times (10) \times (6) = 600$$

Between these dual descriptions is a mirrored sixfold list of precious stones. This literary device parallels the arrangement of mirrored sixfolds in the listing of the twelve tribes, Rev. 7, where Simeon and Levi (sons #2 and #3) commenced the back half of the list (positions #7 and #8). Here in Rev. 21, the mirroring point is shown with a purple dashed line. It is the midpoint between the dual mentions of “gold, pure like glass.” Thus:

$$(\text{mirrored sixfold of precious stones}) = 6$$

The description turns to sixfold things given to the city by God. The city has a temple: “the Lord, the God, the Almighty... and the Lamb.” The city has light: “for the glory of God illuminates her, and her lamp is the Lamb.” Thus:

$$(\text{God}) \times (\text{sixfold gift}) = (10) \times (6) = 60$$

$$\text{Literary Stature of the Bride (Part 2)} = 600 + 6 + 60 = 666$$

“stadia, twelve thousand” | Like the previous instances of “twelve thousand” (Rev. 7), the heavenly number “stadia twelve thousand” is counted as two literary elements. As was discussed previously, the unit “stadion” derives from the Greek/Roman stadium. It was one lap around the stadium. Although it could be used for distance measurements, its meaning arises from athletes circling a two-dimensional (oval) track. In context here in Revelation, it appears “stadia” is meant for division among the three dimensions given for the Holy City, as if for a stadium: each length, each width, and each height dimension of the city. A cube has twelve edges. Dividing this heavenly number among twelve edges, the city may be considered a twelvefold thousand: a thousand stadia in length, a thousand in width, and a thousand in height. The measure thousand may derive from God as well as from the tribes of Israel and the apostles, whose names are written upon the city: $(\text{God}) \times (\text{tribes}) \times (\text{apostles}) = (10) \times (10) \times (10) = 1000$. For the relationship with the six placements of “twelve,” see below.

The numbering of the gemstones may indicate God’s covenant mercy (see comments, Jonah 4:11). The character count for these twelve gemstones is 100-fold in Greek, perhaps corresponding to the two witnesses (10×10) .

[9-10] and the throne of God and of the Lamb, in her, will be

[1-2] and his servants will serve Him, and they will see His face

[3] and His name (will be) upon their foreheads

[4] and night will not be again

[5-6] and they will not have need of light of lamp and light of sun

[7-8] because the Lord, God, will shine upon them

[9-10] and He will reign to the ages of ages

[2] and he said to me

[3-4] these, the words – faithful

[5] and true (are)

[6-7] and the Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets, sent His angel

[8] to show to His servants:

[9] what, it is necessary

[10] to happen in haste

[1-2] and behold, I come, quickly

[1-2] blessed (is) he, keeping the words of the prophecy of this book

[4-5] and I, John, (was) the, hearing and seeing this

[6-7] and when I heard and saw

[8-9] I fell, to worship

[3-4] before the feet of the angel the, showing me this

[5] and he said to me:

[6] your fellow-servant, I am

[7-8] and of your brothers, of the prophets

[3] and of those keeping the words of this book

[1] to God, worship!

[9] and he said to me:

[2] you must not seal the words of the prophecy of this book

[10] for the appointed time, near, is

[1] he doing injustice

[2] let do injustice still

[3] and the defiled, let be defiled still

[4] and the just – righteousness, let do still

[5] and the holy, let be sanctified still

[1-2] behold, I come, quickly

[3] and my reward with Me, to render to each person

[6] as the work is of him

Sevenfold: The Bride-City (Part 3)

The literary composite stature of this third presentation of the Bride-City is reflected about the 437th element from 3000-fold in total count. This reflection point may represent the reversal of the ultimate effect of the curse: of the sending away of humanity from God's presence in the garden (Gen. 3:23), the 437th element in Genesis. Here, the reversal of these effects is clear: "everything accursed will not be again / the throne of God and of the Lamb, in her, will be." Within this immediate context are the return of access to the tree of life and the return of the light of the presence of the "Lord, God" (LORD God). (See comments Gen. 3:23.)

Sevenfold things are welcomed – or are not welcomed – into the holy city:

1. "the kings of earth will bring their glory into her"
- 2-3. "they will bring the glory and the honor of the nations into her"
- 4-6. "(there) must not enter into her every unclean, and (he) doing abomination and falsehood"
7. "only those having been written in the book of the life of the Lamb"

Thus: (sevenfold) = 7

Next, John presents sevenfold character of the city, by literary elements, derived from God and the Lamb:

- 1-3. "river of water of life, bright like crystal, going out from the throne of God and of the Lamb"
- 4-5. "from here and from there, (is) a tree of life"
- 6-7. "the throne of God and of the Lamb, in her, will be"

Thus: (God's people) x (sevenfold character) = (10) x (10) x (7) = 700

Closing out this literary stature, seven blessings characterize God's people:

1. God's servants will serve Him
2. They will see His face
3. His name will be upon their foreheads
- 4-5. They will not need light from either a lamp or the sun
- 6-7. They will experience the Lord, the God, shining upon them. (Again, see notes on Gen. 3:23 for the combination of these names "Lord" (YHWH) and "God." In context, this pairing is parallel with "God" and the "Lamb."

Thus:

$$(\text{God's people}) \times (\text{sevenfold blessings}) = (10) \times (7) = 70$$

Literary Stature of the Bride (Part 3) = 7 + 700 + 70 = 777

144 elements = 144 cubits

In this section, the fourfold literary stature of wall is preceded by the introduction of the fivefold literary stature of the Bride. Within their overlapping statures, the wall’s fourfold stature is developed through a tight grouping of six instances of “twelve”:

“gates twelve”
 “angels twelve”
 “twelve tribes”
 “foundations twelve”
 “twelve names”
 “twelve apostles”

Notice the groupings of (unit | quantity) measures resolving into (quantity | unit) measures: heavenly realities revealed in earthly terms.

These six instances are followed by a thousandfold value of the same number: “he measured the city with the reed at stadia twelve thousand.” As a literary device, this placement amplifies the foregoing descriptions with thousandfold consequence.

This series of six numbers in tight sequence, amplified with thousandfold consequence, occurring within the literary space of stature 444, in a context where the normal sequence has been inverted (555 being placed beforehand) – this is a close parallel with the literary design for the six thousandfolds of the millennium in the previous section (Rev. 19:11-21:4).

The unit cubit may have a literary conversion of fivefold, due to the five-fingered hand that is included in its length measurement. See comments at Daniel 3 and John 21. Here, (144) x (5-fold) = 720-fold, which appears to be the total stature of the “faith” subject columns (see table below). The stature of the wall with its foundations (the twelve apostles) and its gates (the twelve tribes) may reflect the faith-filled people of God from throughout the age, who are blessed to enter this city “by the gates.”

- (145x) Saints

- (80x) “twelve”
- (510x) total

In this section, two Greek words are used exactly ten times¹: “to speak” and “twelve.” Taken in combination with the single word used ten times in the last section (“of / out of / from”), the title for the ending sections of Revelation may be: Out of twelve, I speak. If so, this would be a decisive identification of the author, John, as being the Apostle John.

If the counts for the seven sections of Revelation are accurate, the total literary count for the book of Revelation is 3545 literary elements. This is the literary length of the book. As a literary design, the same measure may be observed in literary conversions of the time values associated with specific time measure or mystery (that is, unit | quantity) format. (The six thousandfolds of Rev. 20 are addressed as a separate literary device at the end of this study.)

The table employs the same literary conversions observed for other books of Scripture:

- A “month” is tenfold (e.g. “months two of ten” of Dan. 4, “months five” of Rev. 9).
- A “day” is singlefold (e.g., the 2,300 evening-mornings of Dan. 8, the “day” of Genesis and of Psalm 90).
- The phrase “one hour” is tenfold. This case arises in three instances in Revelation, where the descriptive literary sets consistently include “woe, woe” to the city Babylon (Rev. 18:10, 17, 19). The same “one hour” is given to ten kings to work their destruction of this same city (Rev. 17:12): a tenfold value. Similarly, at the culmination of the second woe (“woe, woe” of the threefold warning), a tenth of the city falls (Rev. 11:13). Here, in literary terms, a tenfold is placed into the denominator for destruction.
- A “time” is reflected as tenfold (e.g., “seven times” of Dan. 4). The diminished measures “time, little” and “little time” are reflected as threefold values. An “appointed time” is reflected as singlefold. The diminished form “little appointed time” is reflected as half-fold.

Total:				3,545.0

As noted at the beginning of this study, literary cross-references reach forward and backward from the core metrics of 420 and 1260 in chapters eleven and twelve. See illustration and notes, page 3. This device appears to be related to the scroll John eats (Rev. 10:10) and the measurements of temple and altar that proceed (Rev. 11:1-3). The 3545 total in this table may be regarded as the literary breadth of the book.

In chapter 22, the angel has a golden reed with which to measure the city and her gates and walls. The city is “square,” but its measure is boosted into the third dimension. John may have framed the Apocalypse with proportions that correspond to this heavenly city. In addition to the book’s length value of 3545 elements and breadth (width) value of 3545-fold, the book may culminate in a literary height stature of 3545-fold.

In chapter 22, the vision shifts fully to the new heavens and earth. The stature of the vision culminates with the throne of God among His people at the reflection point: the 437th element, the reversal of the curse. See comments, Rev. 22:3. This 437-fold value may also be reflected in context in the angelic measure of the city's walls. The wall (singular) is measured at a "hundred forty-four cubits." The city's measure is presented in an equivalence of three dimensions. Thus, the measure can be taken as $(3) \times (144) = 432$ -fold. As noted previously, this dimensional equivalence is presented with a literary fivefold statement: "her length¹ (is) as long as (even) the width²... her length³ and width⁴ and height⁵ – equal, are." Combining the 432-fold with the literary fivefold results in a city measure of 437-fold.

As has been observed, John appears to use literary composite statures from 111 to 777 in each of the seven major sections of the Apocalypse. In the last major section, the 437-fold measure is the capstone of the seven literary composites: it is concentric with the reflection point of composite stature 777. The seven composite statures of this section are all positive and build toward a single stature. Taken together, these literary composites and the 437-fold capstone ("throne") may form an overall literary height stature for the new holy city – and, by extension, for the Apocalypse: $111 + 222 + 333 + 444 + 555 + 666 + 777 + 437 = 3545$.

Another possible macrostructural design is John's sevenfold use of the combination "day" with "night" to reflect the days of the age. If literary counts are accurate, the fourth and middle instance of "day" with "night" occurs at the exact midpoint of the first 3500 elements of the book: at total literary count 1750/1751 at Rev. 12:10. The seventh and last instance of "day" with "night" occurs at 21:25: "and her gates must never be closed by day / for night will not be there." This seventh instance – particularly, the cessation of night – may correspond with Gen. 2:1-3, where the seventh day is mentioned, but the evening/morning description is omitted. If so, John may indicate the seven days of the age (corresponding with seven thousandfolds), similar to the measure seen in John's gospel and in other New Testament books. The doubled indicator of this device, "day" with "night," balanced as it is about the middle of 3500 elements, may also indicate the doubling of the 3500-fold stature: $(\text{two-fold}) \times (3500) = 7000$ -fold, as the measure of the age.

In this connection, the 3500th element occurs at Rev. 22:14. The immediate context includes the reversal of major outcomes of the fall of humanity in Gen. 3:24: the shame of nakedness and the prevention of access to the tree of life and the garden of God.

[9] in order that, it will be, their authority at the tree of life

[10] and by the gates, that they might enter into the city

Jesus is identified as the "Alpha and O [omega]" near the beginning, at 1:8. He is identified as the "Alpha and the O [omega], the first and the last, the beginning [ἀρχή] and the end [τέλος]" at 22:13, immediately prior to the verse copied just above (element 3500). John's use of alpha and omega clearly pertain to the twenty-four letters of the Greek alphabet, which form bookends at these locations. John's use of the words arché and telos at 22:13 – beginning with letters “a” and “tau” of the Koine Greek alphabet – may be a subtle allusion to the “a” (alef) and “tau” (taw) of the Hebrew alphabet. These are the first and last of the 22 Ancient Hebrew letters. If so, the presence of a 22-fold and a 24-fold, based upon the quantities of alphabetic letters, may indicate the preeminent Hebrew alliterative work – Psalm 119 – as a literary basis. See comments on Psalm 119. In particular, the psalm may function as a solar/lunar calendar, meant to be read one direction for six months (a verse a day) and the reverse direction for the other six, for the waxing and waning of the year’s daylight. As such, the 3500 elements that span between these beginning/ending points may be indicated for forward and reverse directionality, for a total value of 7000-fold.

See the comments at 1:12 on John’s turning around to see the voice that was speaking to him from behind. This turning around at element 100 appears to be a reversal of the sequence in Gen. 3:24, where the turning-around sword prevented access to the Tree of Life (100-element offset). There, the turning-around sword may be modeled as a reversal in directionality in the passage. So also here, the presence of a “turning-around” verb may cue a reversal in directionality: the folding back of time at element 3500, to prevent access to the Tree of Life. “Outside (are) the dogs and the sorcerers and the sexually-immoral and the murderers and the idolators and everyone loving and making a lie” (22:15). Such a reverse in directionality may be further indicated by John’s inversion of the sequence of “Him, existing... the, He was... Him, coming” (1:4, 1:8) relative to the heavenly sequence given in 4:8. This inverted sequence is joined with the “Alpha and Omega” identity statement at 1:8.

In addition to the time-related values discussed above, which correlate with the 3545 total literary count for Revelation, there exists another set of time-related values that are tabulated here. Like the books of Genesis, Daniel, and Matthew – Revelation may contain a literary sixfold measure of the age – 6000 – leading up to the seventh of rest. See detailed comments at the end of the sixth major section, Rev. 21:4. This six thousandfold is shown in the table here. The remaining time values are the more general literary conversions from instances of “day,” “hour,” “month,” “year,” “time,” and “appointed time,” which are not associated with a specific time measure or mystery (that is, unit | quantity) format. For the morning star, John uses a different Greek word for morning than he uses in his gospel. Considering the association with star here – a star that shines brightly toward the conclusion of the night and heralds the dawn – these two instances of *morning are not counted at 0.5-fold each. (The word night is not given a literary conversion count.)

Here in Revelation, the sixfold measure of the age may be augmented by two literary identities working in alignment: $10 \times 10 = 100$. As with Daniel, these two literary identities may be those of God in union with His faith-filled people – His “blessed” saints. The measure of the age may also be finalized by a literary thirty-twofold measure that reflects something having been given over. This number may reflect the age stature of Jesus upon His death (see the theme of Christ’s death, e.g., in Rev. 5:6/9/12 and 13:8). The Book of Daniel reflects the same total time conversion of 6132, with the number 32 also reflected in the number of literary rests in Daniel. (See remarks, end of Daniel study.)
